Darwin's Theory Denounced

PROFESSOR CALLS IT "COMPLETE FRAUD"

Darwin's theory of natural selection—the adequacy of which was questioned by Professor F. Balfour Brown—was roundly denounced as a complete fraud at the British Association meeting at Norwich last month.

The declaration to this effect by Professor E. W. MacBride, F.R.S., of the Imperial College of Science, South Kensington, caused something of a sensation, and in discussing it afterwards a zoologist described it as "a spatter thrown in the works."

Professor MacBride roundly declared:

"The doctrine of natural selection as the cause of evolution is a complete fraud, a complete fallacy."

"Of course, in one sense natural selection must be true, because it is obvious to a child in the early stages of the elementary school that children of the next generation must be born from grown-up people."

"It is obvious that the next generation must have arisen from those of a former one, so that the survival of the fittest simply means that the survivors survive. The doctrine of natural selection means evolution by chance."

Criticism Justified

"All the attacks of Darwin's opponents based on this interpretation were justified. They were just as true when made fifty years ago as now."

"The reason they did not prevail was a psychological reason. Darwin's 'Origin of Species' coincided with a general feeling of revolt against traditional authority, and this theory gave to the younger members of the community a splendid stick with which to beat Moses. (Laughter.) If one raised these objections they were howled down."

"But the doctrine does resolve into chance and nothing else." Professor MacBride said that if habit was transmitted in small degree to the child, the whole problem of evolution was solved.

Professor Sir E. D. Poulton, one of those who answered Professor MacBride, declared that Professor MacBride stood against the opinion of practically the whole biological world. "We admire his courage, but we do not follow him in his opinions."

ATLANTIC AIR LINKS

INTERNATIONAL RIVALRY FOR BLUE RIBBON

FIVE NATIONS WILL COMPETE

London, Oct. 1.

INTERNATIONAL rivalry to be first in the air with a regular North Atlantic airmail and passenger service has become even more acute as Great Britain speeds up her own plans for a regular weekly or fortnightly air link between London and New York.

At least five nations—the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Holland—are known to be keenly interested in establishing such a service.

British aviation authorities have been severely slated in some quarters here on the ground that Great Britain is sitting by and letting her rivals get a lead in the North Atlantic air race.

There is good reason to believe, however, that this country has no intention of lagging behind. Without any fanfares of trumpets British technicians, engineers and weather experts are working hard on preliminary survey of the probable routes to be operated and on the special planes to be used for the service.

At the present moment two separate routes are being examined—a northerly one for summer and a more southerly course for the winter months.

The northern route to be flown from this beginning of June until the end of September will total approximately 3,470 miles in three hops. They are:

London-Londerry . . . 310 miles
Londerry-Port Botwood 2060, miles
Port Botwood-New York 1,100 miles

The southern route to be taken in winter when chronic bad weather virtually bars out the northern one will be in four hops:

London—Gibraltar.
Gibraltar—Azores.
Azores—Bermuda.
Bermuda—New York.

This route, which also has an ocean hop of over 2,000 miles, will be about 2,000 miles longer than the northern course.

If present plans materialise it will be operated alternately by Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways, which already has a regular service between New York and Bermuda.

It is understood, however, that last minute weather reports may divert planes from the northern to the southern route even in the summer months when the weather can be far from equable over the North Atlantic.

A preliminary report on the potentialities of Londerry as a trans-Atlantic airport and seaplane base has just been made to the British Air Ministry by Maxwell Ayton, architect of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley in 1923. He estimated that a suitable airport could be established there for about £30,000. The Irish Free State has also put forward the claims of Galway in Free State territory as another possible port of call at this end of the Atlantic hop.

Two experts from the British Air Ministry, I. H. McLure and M. R. Banks, have just conducted a similar survey in Newfoundland and reported in favour of Port Botwood as a seaplane base. The aerodrome will probably be at Glenwood, near Cob's Camp.

Meanwhile, tenders have been invited for the construction of a seaplane base in Bermuda, probably on one of the smaller islands.

It has not yet been decided definitely whether aeroplane or flying boats will be used on the Imperial Airways Atlantic services. It is believed, however, that aeroplanes will be used on one route and flying boats on the other. The Short aircraft company is planning to build a flying boat of 200 tons and 30,000 horsepower, designed to withstand any weather normally encountered over the Atlantic. Owing to the immense size of this machine its wings would be out of reach of normal waves when it alights on the water. The wings would also be thick enough to accommodate the engines.

It is expected that the Atlantic crossing would occupy between fifteen and thirty hours, according to route taken and the strength of winds encountered. On both routes the east-to-west crossing would probably be shorter as the prevailing winds are mostly westerly.—United Press.

Carioca Not Spiritual Enough For Nazis

BALLROOMS WILL GO "ARYAN" THIS WINTER

Berlin, Oct. 1.

GERMANY'S ballrooms will go "Aryan" this winter, and ballroom experts here are frowning on such foreign importations as the "Carioca."

Under the heading "The Days of Fashion-Foolishness are Gone," a prominent Berlin teacher of dancing deals with the dances for the coming season in the newspaper Nachtausgabe. Germans, he says, must not look forward to any new dances being introduced from abroad. They must, in conformity with the spirit of National-Socialist Germany, concentrate on perfecting the good old dances they have always danced.

This season he says, Germans will dance

The Waltz,
The Fox-trot, and
The Tango.
But not the Carioca.

This last dance he describes as "certainly an amusing dance, but in our eyes one that is grotesque and laughable, which has a negro origin and therefore does not suit the spiritual tendency of our times."

He says that the times when a different sort of dance had to be made the fashion of the season is, happily, no more in Germany.—Reuter.

JAUNT"Sea Devil" Pays A Visit To Former*Enemies In London*HE BLUFFED OUR NAVY*SLIPPED THROUGH BLOCKADE BY SINGING
"TIPPERARY"

THE "SEA DEVIL" IS IN LONDON. COUNT FELIX VON LUCKNER, ROBIN HOOD OF THE SEA. YOU KNOW HIM. THE WHOLE WORLD KNOWS HIM.

He is the huge, hawk-nosed, laughing fellow who took a sailing ship out to sea from Germany during the war, glided gaily through the dense British blockade under the very nose of Jellicoe, gained the ocean and played havoc with British and Allied shipping in the Atlantic and Pacific.

He sank $8,000,000 of Allied shipping with his old windjammer, raiding the trade routes of the oceans in the guise of an innocent trader.

He was one of the greatest menaces to shipping in the latter days of the war. Yet he escaped capture to go and raid England last month with a smile that would open the gates of a prison.

Never once in all his raids did he cause the loss of a single life. He sank dozens of ships, yet not even a ship's cat was drowned.

"I have come to raid your hearts," he said to a London press representative when he bounded down from the air-liner at Croydon.

"Ah! How did I get through the blockade?" he laughed in answer to a question.

"Well, I know the British are conservative. They believe what they see until they see they are wrong. Then they never believe you again. As I approached the Grand Fleet I was an innocent Norwegian. My old schooner was the most peaceful ship at sea.

This is the Count's boast: "I sank a good many ships, but I have this to relieve my conscience from those old days of the war—I never deprived a mother of the life of her son, a wife of her husband or a boy of his father. I took on board all the crews and passengers of the ships that I sank."

He said that the name "Sea Devil" was given to him by the British. His famous raider was the Seendler, a Norwegian clipper formerly American-owned.

Broke The Blockade

"We broke through the blockade in the North Sea by convincing the British Fleet that we were Norwegians."

"Before we sailed out every one of us learned Norwegian. We mastered the language so that even the British—then the most cautious and suspicious people in the world—believed we were neutral Norwegians."

"We dressed one young sailor up as woman. He was supposed to be my wife. As a sailor he looked rather tough, but in the clothes we made him wear he was quite a handsome woman."

We had a gramophone, and when a British ship came along to challenge us we put on a record. "It's a long way to Tipperary."

For Use
Of His Name*PROTEST TELEGRAM
SENT IN "LOBBYING"

Columbia (South Carolina), Oct. 1.

A SUIT for $20,000 damages has been filed here by a Post Office worker as a result of the current Congressional inquiry into "lobbying" activities in Washington.

The inquiry elicited astonishing facts about the methods used by a section of "big business" in their efforts to defeat the Rayburn-Wheeler Utilities Bill.

Evidence before the Senate disclosed that thousands of false signatures, or names taken at random from telephone books, had been attached to telegrams sent to members of Congress urging them to throw out the measure limiting the powers of utility holding companies.

"Mental Anguish"

Fred Turnipseed, a local postal worker, claims $20,000 from the Broad River Power Company of Columbia, a unit of the Associated Gas and Electric system, alleging that the company had signed his name without authorization to a telegram of protest despatched to Washington.

Mr. Turnipseed further submits that the telegram was sent in "utter disregard of his rights, and with the object of promoting the company's interest to influence Senator Byrnes to vote and use his influence against enactment of the Utilities Bill," and that this caused him great mental anguish and loss of sleep.

The Turnipseed action is regarded as a test case which may establish the right of individuals whose names were used without their sanction in the campaign against the Utilities Bill to receive compensation from the companies.

Influencing Congressmen Legal circles are interested in this case because it points the way to what will probably be the one means of preventing such "lobbying" tactics in the future.

It is thought to be unlikely that any measures will be taken against those who admitted responsibility for these tactics before the Senate.

On the other hand, if individual members of the public are successful in winning cases on the same lines as Mr. Turnipseed, "lobbyists" for powerful interests will be deterred from resorting to such means of influencing Congressmen in the future.—Reuter.

ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION

Melbourne, Sept. 28.

Having survived for 11 days in the artificial respirator, Ruby Currie has established an Australian record.

The girl yesterday spent four hours outside the respirator. The world record tenancy of an artificial respirator by a patient who has recovered is three weeks.

A recent message stated that Ruby Currie, aged six years, was struggling desperately for life in the Children's Hospital.

She has been living in an artificial respirator and breathing only by artificial means.

The child is suffering from diphtheria and paralysis of the diaphragm. The hospital authorities say there is hope of her recovery.

Names in A Convict's
Diary Hushed Up When Produced In Court

A SECRET document, written by a convict in his cell at the Old Bailey, was produced at the resumed hearing of the charges against the two Nottingham fire assessors, Ronald Alfred Relf and Harry Davis Hayden, at Bow-street Police Court, London, last week.

Harry Gould spent his time while awaiting sentence with Leopold Harris and the rest of his gang, writing out a long memorandum—virtually a diary with names and dates.

This document the convict passed to Superintendent Yandell, the Scotland-yard chief, and it has been kept a close secret during the two years Gould has been in gaol. He was sentenced to six years penal servitude.

Carefully Hidden

Gould is a witness in the present case against the two assessors, and when he returned to the box the document was produced.

Only a part of the pencilled memoranda on the first page of the convict's cell notes was revealed—the rest of the tell-tale document was carefully concealed.

Mr. Roland Oliver, K.C., the leading counsel for the prosecution, disclosed the reason for this.

On the notes were a number of names, which, Mr. Oliver explained, had nothing whatever to do with the present case. The only name relevant to the hearing was that of the defendant Hayden, and for that reason he asked that the rest of the document should not be disclosed.

Counsel in the case conferred together, while the magistrate retired to his room. They studied the document closely, and when the magistrate returned to the Bench, Mr. Oliver announced that it had been fair from every point of view if any name except the relevant one, were seen.

The hush-hush diary of the man from Maidstone Gaol, still with most of its secrets unknown except to three or four persons, was then

Gould's wife was again in court. She heard her husband twice dramatically demand the right to clear his name of a suggestion of blackmail. The convict was under cross-examination when the word blackmail was introduced.

Wuchow, Oct. 14. In connection with the previously reported explosion at the chemical ward of the Kwangsi University on October 10, which caused the life of Professor Soong Men-ching, it is understood that four other persons were badly injured, including Mrs. Soong, two students and Miss Soong (the professor's niece).

Professor Soong was making a demonstration when some powerful chemical materials dropped to the ground and exploded.

The two students, who were standing by the Professor were badly injured. The other two persons hurt were his wife and niece, a girl of 15.

The whole University is plunged into mourning by the death of Professor Soong, who was only 37 years of age, a native of Hunan. He had recently joined the University, after the summer holidays. —Wah Kiu Yat Po.

ITALY'S ANGER

BRITAIN ACCUSED OF PROVOKING WAR

Rome, Oct. 14. An official spokesman, speaking with considerable heat, charged Great Britain with provoking tension between Britain and Italy with the possibility arising in consequence of a European war. The spokesman declared that, "Britain is determined to create a war, in order to defeat Fascist Italy, and the concentration of the British Fleet in the Mediterranean cannot but arouse suspicion. We refuse to accept Mr. Eden's statement, 'we do not wish to trouble Italy.'"

"Our naval authorities have noticed that since October 7 the British naval vessels have gone behind all precedent, and do not even return courtesy salutes in the Mediterranean."

The official spokesman also said: "Provocative offences cannot be disguised as justifiable precautions, whatever the emergency may be." —United Press.

Reported Offer To Selassie

Addis Ababa, Oct. 14. It is reliable reported that the Emperor has refused to consider an Italian peace proposal under which Italy keeps the territory now occupied plus certain concessions, which would give Italy the virtual control over Ethiopia. It is believed that Count Vinci and Colonel Gigliucci have refused to leave because they still entertain hopes of conducting diplomatic manoeuvres towards peace. —United Press.

Warning to Rome

London, Oct. 14. As the result of a resolution drawn up in Addis Ababa by the ministers of Britain, the United States, Belgium, France, Germany, Egypt and Greece, the British Ambassador at Rome has drawn the attention of the Italian Government to the fact that Addis Ababa and Dire Dawa are open towns, with large foreign populations. Signor Suvitch, the Italian Foreign Minister, replied that he would make a note of it and notify the military authorities. It is presumed that the other powers have made similar representations.

It has been announced that consequent on the refusal of the arms embargo against Ethiopia, application by British exporters is to be considered by the Board of Trade. —Reuter.

British Leave

London, Oct. 14. The British Legation in Addis Ababa has warned British women and children and all other British subjects who can do so to leave the country without delay. Nearly 500 British subjects and persons who are British protected are now concentrated at Addis Ababa. They consist of about 100 who are British born, 200 British Indians, 100 Arabs and 50 from British Somaliland.

There are 50 Scandinavians and Portuguese and members of other nationalities who are British protected in Ethiopia.

outlined by Inspector C. Rozesky at the previous hearing, was that on September 30 Mrs. Sherriff had given the accused $3.75 and a bill for coal, and had asked him to settle it. On October 5, she asked defendant whether he had paid the bill, and defendant replied he had not and that he had gambled away the money. She then asked him to go and find the money, and after an argument defendant left. Defendant returned to the house about noon, and when Mrs. Sherriff heard him talking in a loud voice she got frightened and locked the back door. Mr. Sherriff returned home about 12.45 p.m., and she then told him what had happened. Mr. Sherriff went into the servants' quarters who produced the $3.75 and the bill. He then told defendant he would have to leave at which defendant asked for five days' pay. Mr. Sherriff told him that could be settled at the Bay View Police Station.

Defendant then made for the kitchen and opened a drawer and took out a knife. Mr. Sherriff caught him by the back of his shoulders and a struggle ensued, during the course of which both Mr. and Mrs. Sherriff were wounded by the defendant, who made his escape when Mr. Sherriff slipped and fell in the kitchen. Defendant was arrested in Causeway Bay Road by Mr. Bolt, of the P. W. D. The knife with which the assault was committed was never found. Both complainants had superficial cuts.

Jabbed at Complainant

Yesterday, Mr. Sherriff gave evidence, followed by Mr. Tom Bolt, who stated he saw a commotion in the back of Mr. Sherriff's house, and saw both complainant and defendant apparently trying to hit each other. Defendant held something in his hand, and appeared to be jabbing at the complainant. He saw the defendant go down the back steps and ran to intercept him. He called on defendant to stop, which he did, and he waited till Mr. Sherriff joined them, after which the three of them proceeded to the Bay View Police Station. The defendant had nothing in his hand when he called on him to stop.

An amah, employed by the complainants, also gave evidence, after which a Chinese detective, Chung Wai, deposed to having made a search for the knife but without result.

The defendant corroborated all the evidence with regard to the bill and the $3.75, but with regard to the alleged wounding, he stated that he entered the kitchen and took the knife out of a drawer with the intention of working, when he was pulled from behind by Mr. Sherriff, who put both his arms around him. He then threw the knife away. He ran to pick-up the knife, and Mr. Sherriff came after him, so he ran down into the street, where he was stopped by Mr. Bolt.

Mr. Schofield convicted defendant and passed sentence.

After An Illness Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Speed Recovery.

Recovery from an illness is often slow because the blood has become impoverished, scanty and thin; therefore to regain health and strength the main essential is to build up the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills rapidly improve the blood, and their efficacy during convalescence is strikingly proved in the case of Mrs. Margaret Brethour of Cornwall, Ontario, Canada, who gives all the credit of her quick recovery to this world famous tonic.

"I was in hospital four months after the birth of my baby," states Mrs. Brethour, "and came home weighing only sixty five pounds. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and it wasn't long until I weighed ninety five pounds, and my general health was of the best. Every spring since then I take the pills as a tonic, and would not be without them. I strongly recommend them to all mothers."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the ideal tonic in any illness which has impoverished blood as a basic cause. They also are a proved specific for nervous debility, digestive weakness, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, and the ailments peculiar to women. Chemists everywhere sell.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET UPWARD YESTERDAY

New York, Oct. 14. The following reports on the New York Stock Market have been received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz:

The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's markets: Securities today were upward and Dow-Jones industrial average reached a new high level since 1931. Chrysler issues advanced to the highest level since 1929, while other automobile stocks were also upward, due to the outlook regarding sales. The Iron and Steel Institute report operations at 50.4 per cent of capacity, which has influenced the entire List. Bonds were irregular. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were also upward.

S. C. and F. New York office cables: Securities were in renewed demand on bullish business prospects. The United Corporation has earned 2 cents per share for the quarter ended September 30th, against 5 cents per share during the corresponding quarter of last year. The Radio Corporation of America is selling a portion of its Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation security holdings to the Atlas Corporation.

New York and Chicago commodity reports received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz: Cotton: Trade buying is confined to declines only and heavy hedge sales will probably carry prices moderately lower, when purchases are advisable. The long-range outlook is higher.

Wheat: The market declined on further beneficial rains in the Argentine, lack of export demand for Canadian wheat and the heaviness of the foreign markets. The visible supply shows an increase of 2,149,000 bushels.

Corn: The visible supply has decreased by 456,000 bushels. Settlement is bearish.

Rubber: Some light profit-taking was in evidence. The market is steady and looks higher. Manufacturers are now showing more interest. Special: Steel mill activity is estimated at 50.4 per cent of capacity, against 49.7 per cent the previous week. Grant's estimate of production of Cars and Trucks in the United States and Canada during the week ended October 12 totalled 31,643 units.

REDS IN KANSU

MISSIONARIES LEAVING THE PROVINCE

Peiping, Oct. 14. Fourteen Americans, comprising 11 adults and three children, mostly missionaries and their families, are preparing to leave Lanchow, Kansu province, for Sianfu, Shan-shai, as a result of Communist depredations in south-east Kansu, according to a missionary dispatch from Lanchow reaching the American embassy here to-day. The dispatch stated the Reds have made further forays into Kansu but were repulsed as a result of effective co-operation between the national government forces and Tibetan and Moslem troops.—Union News.

Reds Threaten Lanchow

Sian, Oct. 14.

General Chiang Kai-shek is pouring his blue-clad legions through this gateway city to north-west China in an unending stream in order to check the Red threat to Lanchow, the capital of Kansu, 400 miles to the north-west.

Chinese advices indicate that the main Red army has succeeded in accomplishing the seemingly impossible feat of crossing the towering mountain barrier between Szechuan and Kansu. They have captured Minhsien, 125 miles south of Lanchow in the face of fierce opposition from the Moslems and Tibetans.

The fourteen American missionaries belonging to the China Inland Mission, the Seventh Day Adventists and the Assemblies of God who are waiting for evacuation at Lanchow have been advised against the use of roads and rivers by the authorities because of the danger of bandits.—Union News.

TROUBLE AT JEHOI

JAPANESE TROOPS AND "RIOTERS"

Peiping, Oct. 14.

It is reported here that a serious riot has broken out in Eastern Jehoi. Fighting has been going on near Chaoyang between the Japanese troops and rioters.

Over 3,000 Japanese troops from the Japanese Kwantung Armies have been despatched to Jehoi today with full instructions to round up the rioters. No details of the situation at Jehoi have been received here, but it is so far confirmed that severe fighting is still going on around the city of Chaoyang and the vicinities.—Wah Kin Yat Po.

LEAGUE ACTION

The Italian newspapers recently have been full of anti-British propaganda of a most violent kind. Later on, perhaps, when the clear light of reason returns, the Italian people may realise how ridiculous these "hymns of hate" have been. War-time propaganda always does appear a little ludicrous to a later generation. However, there is one point to be remembered. The present outbreak is not entirely a case of spontaneous combustion. Britain's solicitude for international law and order merely fanned the smouldering fuel of Italian discontent. Italy expected to be richly rewarded for the part which she played in the Great War. Her waiting dreams were not satisfied. Since then she has cast envious eyes upon the colonial possessions, protectorates and mandates held by her neighbours. There were fears at one time in certain quarters that Italy might try to grab what she had long coveted. But these were quite unfounded. And Italy's discretion in this matter is very simply explained. The Italian Government knows without any shadow of doubt that British territory would be defended, and that Great Britain would defend it single-handed if necessary. This patent fact has a bearing upon the question of "sanctions" which the Italo-Ethiopian dispute has made topical. We are sometimes told by the isolationists that "sanctions mean war". This argument, however, requires the closest scrutiny. We have seen that Britain can defend the tiniest morsel of her territory—as well as the largest—without resort to war. The League principles, on which rest the whole of civilisation, could be defended in the same way. There is one proviso. It must be shown that those principles are taken as seriously as a piece of territory. Rightly or wrongly, Italy at first suspected that Great Britain and France would not go out of their way to uphold the Covenant of the League of Nations. Hence her defiant attitude towards the League. But the League is just as strong as its Member-States make it. Happily, no member has actually voted against the application of sanctions in the present dispute, while over fifty countries have endorsed this method of dealing with the crisis. It is naturally hoped that the first of these sanctions will impress the fact on Italy that unwarranted aggression cannot be tolerated, and that she may, even at this late hour, reconsider her policy. If not, the League members will not hesitate to bring further pressure to bear. That is the position at the moment. Time will show whether united action by League members will bring Italy around to a more reasonable frame of mind.

NOTES OF THE DAY

THE SCENE SHIFTS

The drama which is unfolded day by day on the world's stage, and which the newspapers attempt to allow their readers to glimpse, event by event, is one of constantly shifting scenes. Yesterday we were watching Ethiopia, or Rome, or London, or Paris. World interest centred there, and in the reactions to the decision which labouring statesmen were making at Geneva. To-day, since rifles cracked on the banks of the Amur River, the eyes of the world turn to the Far East again. The often-heard, and often-to-be-repeated threat, of hostilities on the Manchukuo-Soviet border is once more to the fore. What is it about? The Japanese authorities state that the Soviet frontier guards crossed the border and that the Manchukuoan troops opened fire and drove them back. The Russian Government has received from its military headquarters at Khabarovsk a statement that the Manchukuo patrol crossed the frontier and deliberately attacked Soviet guards. Time was when the incident would have been sufficient to have sent these two powerful nations flying at each other's throats without a thought of seeking explanations. We have not progressed much beyond that state, but the realisation of the frightfulness of war and the paralysing cost of it, makes Governments think twice before they strike. On this occasion, at least, they are talking of a mixed commission to determine the rights and wrongs of the case. Nevertheless, such episodes are dangerous. They must not occur with too great frequency. With the world in the nervous condition it is at present such trivialities are apt to bring us much too close to flashpoint. And we in the Far East are much too close to the guns.

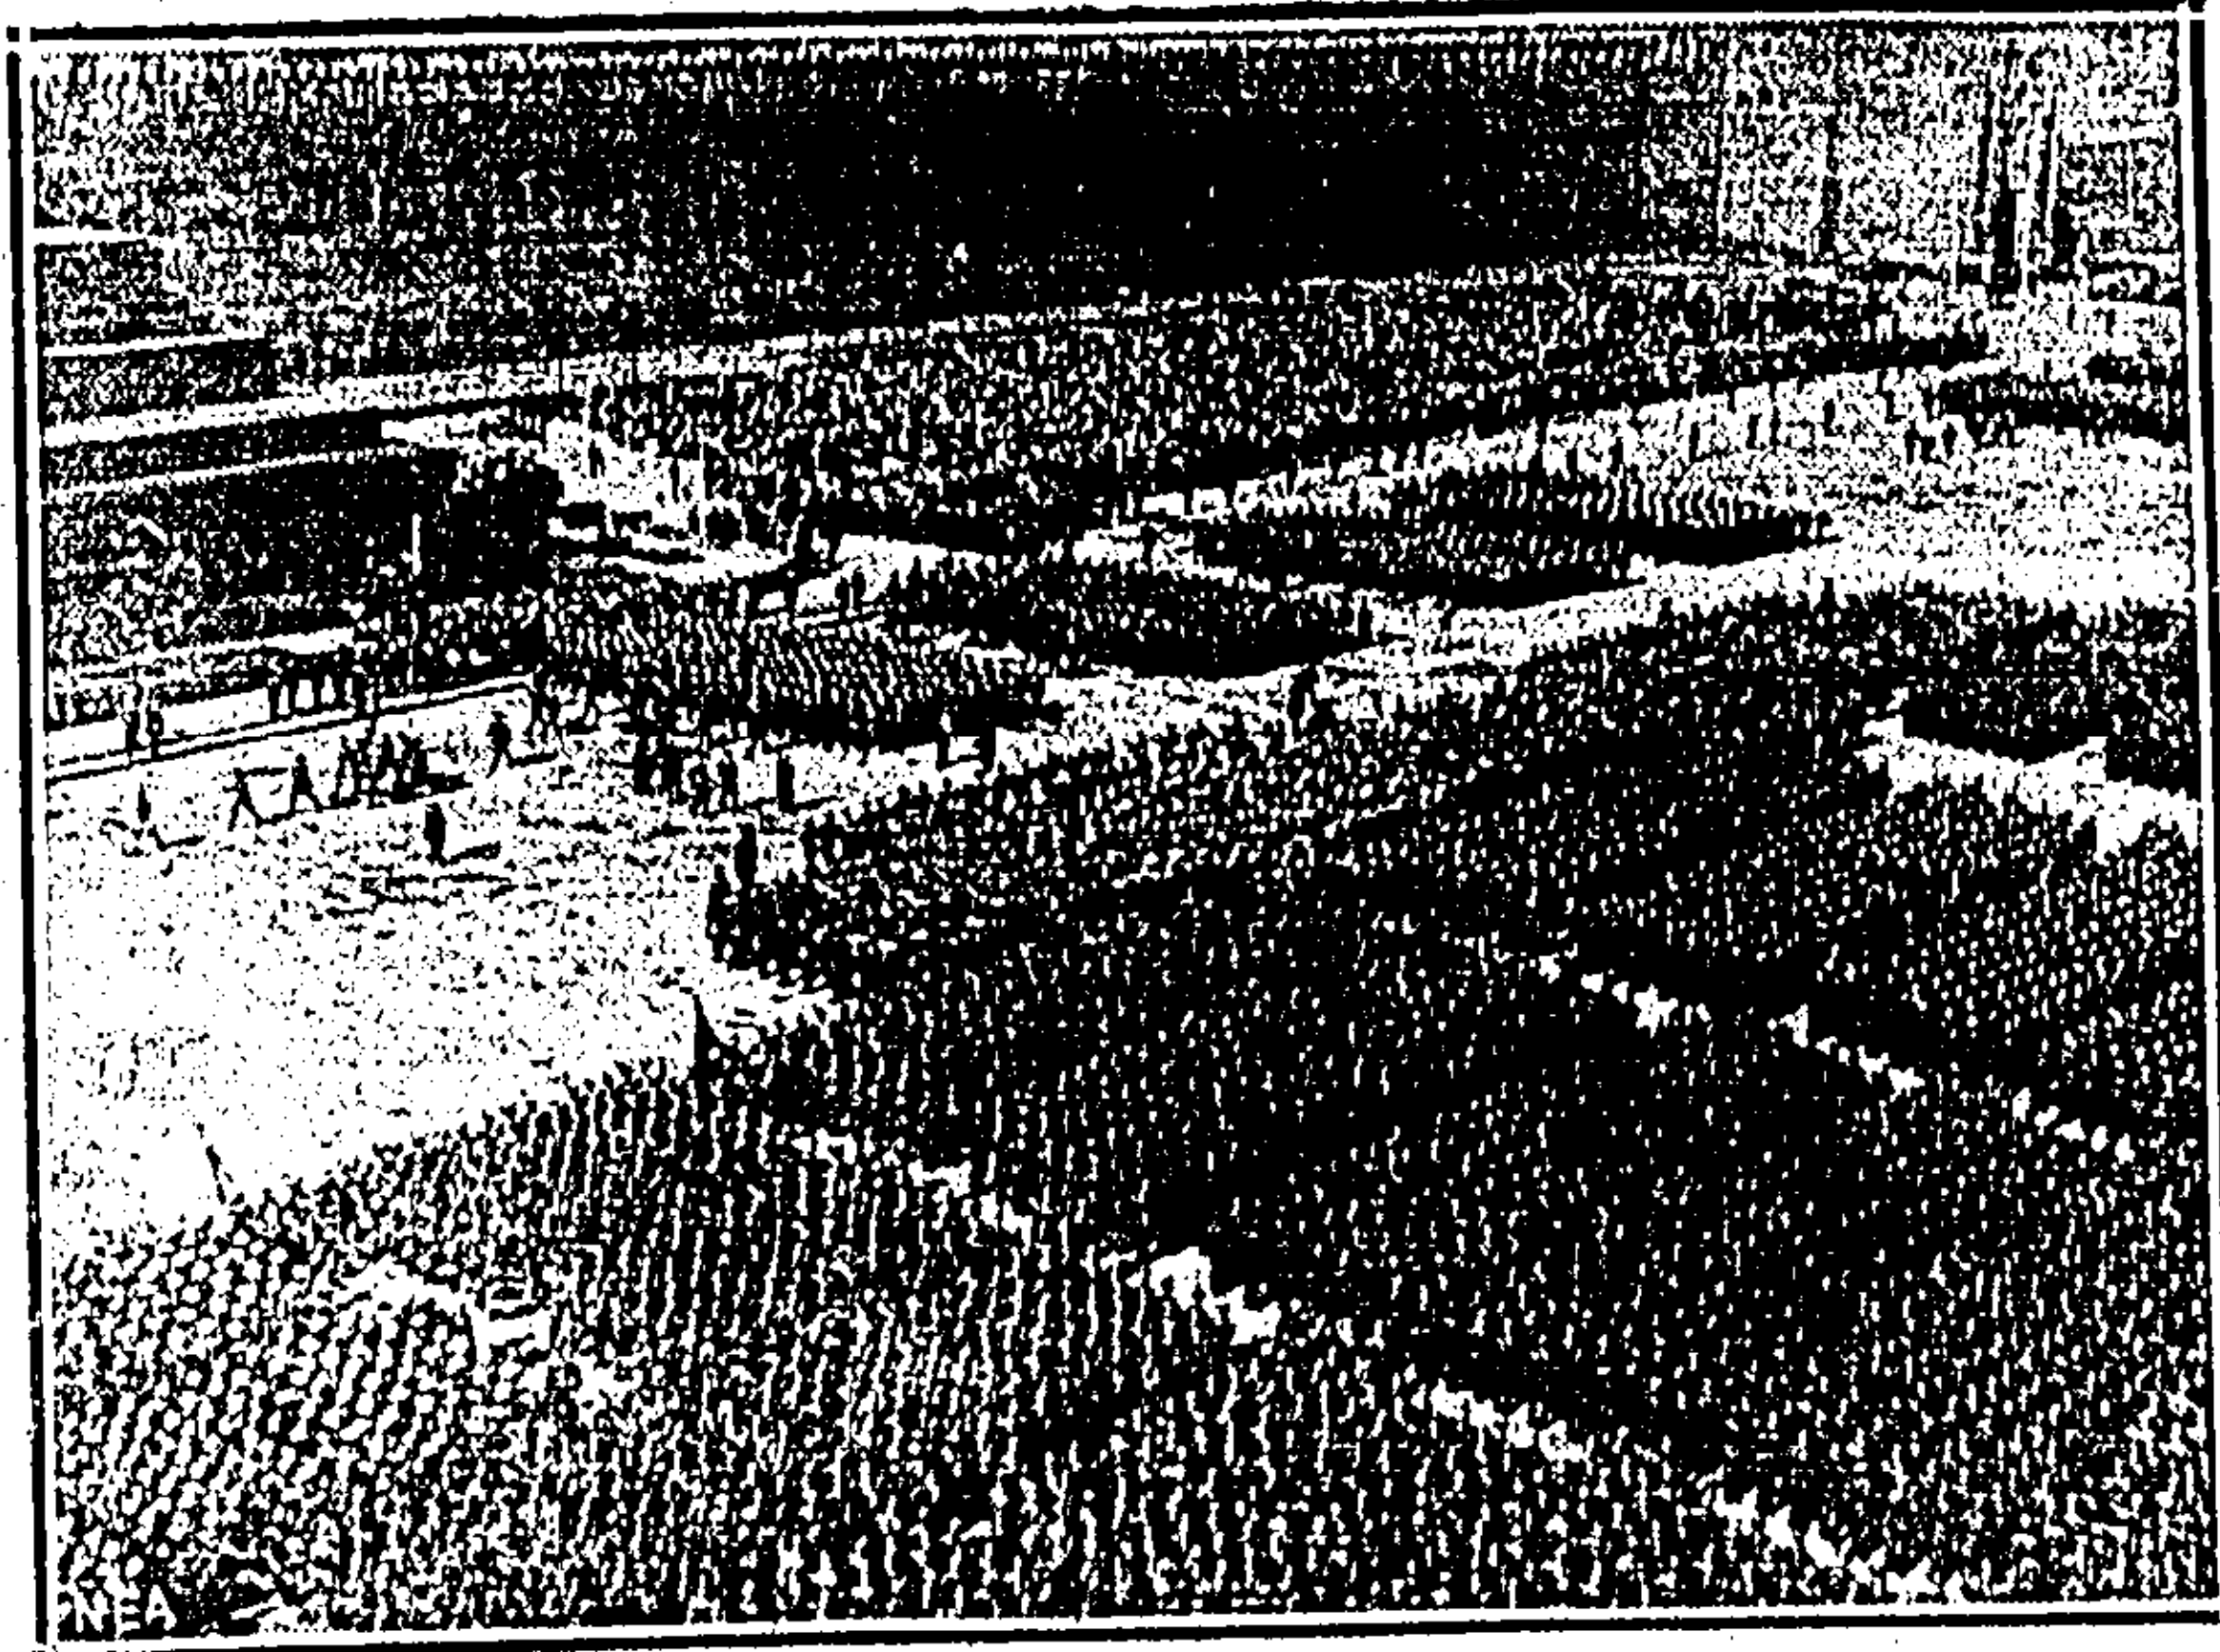

SPEAKING OF NEWS

Going back to the idea of all the world being a stage, as Shakespeare put it, but with greater felicity, and the newspapers shifting the spot-light, so to speak, we want to call attention to that incident in Vienna, in which a Hungarian writer featured as the villain of the piece. He has been arrested for spreading false information. And quite rightly. We feel, like any other honest trader or artist or practitioner, that under-weight or distortion or sharp practice would be the ruin of our business. Unfortunately, newspapers at the ends of the earth have no way of checking upon the veracity of correspondents whose despatches reach them from centres of activity. They rely upon the well-established reputations of the news services they employ to "cover" their interests. Newspapers believe what they print; otherwise they would not print it. In such instances as this one in Vienna, where a journalist has been accused of spreading false information, his principals would be the first to censure him were he found guilty. There are, fortunately, few of that type of journalist who have the confidence of the employers and the public. The untrustworthy are known to the trade; and the trade will have no truck with them.

The fact must be faced that along with the development of Japanese imperialism on the ground has gone a progressive strengthening of the military party at home. The chief British weapon in the China Sea up to the present time has been economic power; but this also is being shattered by the Japanese trade offensive. Last year India, for instance, imported 600,000,000 yards of cotton goods from England and 645,000,000 yards from Japan. Figures in various lines of trade, along the China coast, in held by Japan for generations, and justified in her eyes by the pressure of an increasing population, and intensified by the diplomatic rebuffs and restrictions imposed by America and the European Powers in the past 25 years, has become an open expression of national temper.

Most of Japan's liberal leaders have dropped out of the picture; several of them have been assassinated. A year ago re-

WILL JAPAN and RUSSIA FIGHT?

Soviet Russia's mighty army on parade in the Red Square, Leningrad.

FOR years now the world has watched with increasing apprehension the growth of a war sentiment between Japan and Russia.

The military party in Japan wants to seize Russia's port of Vladivostok and her Maritime Province of Siberia lying just across the Japan Sea. Vladivostok, at the end of the Trans-Siberian Railway, offers a real military menace to Japan. With this port as a base, a fleet of Russian planes could easily cross the Japan Sea, less than 400 miles wide, bomb the Island Empire, and possibly inflict serious damage on the Japanese Navy.

From a political standpoint, the Russian Maritime Province is necessary to Japan to complete the outlines of her new Asiatic empire.

Other issues are incidental. Japan wants Russian recognition of Manchukuo, and probably of the similar "independent" government that apparently is being set up in Inner Mongolia. It is even stated that the imperialistic dreams of the war party contemplate the seizing of all Siberia and Mongolia as far as Lake Baikal.

The Maritime Province of Siberia is left as a narrow strip of seaboard extending southward to Vladivostok, connected with Russia proper only by the main line of the Trans-Siberian Railway, a section cutting a wide circle northward through semi-Arctic territory. Japan is rushing a railway northward to cut the main line of the Trans-Siberian at Blagoveshensk. When this is completed, the Maritime Province will be entirely cut off and Vladivostok as a base will be strategically untenable.

If the military party is to continue in control of the policies of Japan, it looks like a flat issue between the two nations. Japan intends to have the Maritime Province. She can win it by force of arms, or Russia can cede it to her without resistance. The latter course is hardly within reason. Russian opinion would not support further concessions. The question is, then, whether the military party is to remain in power.

The fact must be faced that along with the development of Japanese imperialism on the ground has gone a progressive strengthening of the military party at home.

SUCCESS has inflamed the spirit of the Japanese nation. The dream of Asiatic empire, held by Japan for generations, and justified in her eyes by the pressure of an increasing population, and intensified by the diplomatic rebuffs and restrictions imposed by America and the European Powers in the past 25 years, has become an open expression of national temper.

Most of Japan's liberal leaders have dropped out of the picture; several of them have been assassinated. A year ago revised regulations made the Japanese navy answerable only to the Emperor. The Japanese army was already in a similar position. Now both branches of the fighting force are independent agencies, free of the restraint of the Premier or the Foreign Minister. What they choose to do must become the foreign policy of the land. This amounts to the abrogation of constitutional government, and places the fate of the nation in the hands of the military party.

WHAT influence can America and the European Power actually bring to bear on this latest phase of the Far Eastern crisis?

In the event of a trial of force between the United States and Japan, it is doubtful if the American fleet could be effective. The nearest American naval base to Japan is at Honolulu, 3,000 miles away. It seems likely that Japan could stay in home waters with her full fleet and that the American navy could not safely attack her there. And without naval control of the Pacific, America could contribute neither troops nor supplies to the defence of the Maritime Province of Siberia.

BRITAIN has vast interests in the China Sea, yet in terms of ability to hold by force what she possesses in the Pacific region, her weakness is self-evident.

Hongkong is not a first class naval base. The base at Singapore will not be finished until 1937. A single successful stroke against Hongkong would dislodge Great Britain altogether from the Orient, would throw her back on the Mediterranean as the nearest base, and might even open up India to Japanese attack. At least it would bring Australia and New Zealand within the range of Japanese naval power.

The chief British weapon in the China Sea up to the present time has been economic power; but this also is being shattered by the Japanese trade offensive.

Last year India, for instance, imported 600,000,000 yards of cotton goods from England and 645,000,000 yards from Japan. Figures in various lines of trade, along the China coast, in held by Japan for generations, and justified in her eyes by the pressure of an increasing population, and intensified by the diplomatic rebuffs and restrictions imposed by America and the European Powers in the past 25 years, has become an open expression of national temper.

France does not possess such large vested interests as Great Britain in China. Indo-China is her largest colony. It is far removed from Japan, and Japan does not covet it. France has assassinated. A year ago re-

Japanese plans, and many reasons for favouring them. Weak and disorganized China still presents a more formidable threat to the Japanese military plan than any other nation. Japan is well aware that Manchukuo is none too stable; the preponderance of the Chinese population there is overwhelming. And in China proper the boycott against Japan is always ready to be brought into play. Yet in view of hard facts there is no escaping the conclusion that if the military party in Japan insists on attacking Siberia, Russia will have to rely on her own force of arms.

STRATEGICALLY the Russian position in Vladivostok is hopelessly bad. Strong military preparations have been made; large stores of munitions have been sent from Russia and plans laid for the Soviet army to subside as far as possible on Eastern Siberia.

Perhaps the strongest force for peace is the fact that the Maritime Province of Siberia is not really a threat against Japan unless she so believes. Left alone, Russia would never dream of attacking Japan from Vladivostok. If the Japanese imperial dream could only contain itself, immediate danger of war in the Far East would quickly disappear.

JUST to be in the running we suppose we should comment on the Abyssinian situation again to-day.

But the only fresh news we've read about Abyssinia is the report of the awful smells in Adowa.

This is evidently the reason why many members of St. John Ambulance in Hongkong are eager to volunteer for service in Abyssinia. They'll at least feel at home in one respect—they won't be allowed to forget the Wanchai or Central markets.

"Do you think there's going to be a war?" a friend asked us on the Star Ferry last night. "We're sure there is," we said sadly, "we've spent the money the wife gave us to pay the com-pradore's account."

Mussolini's to blame. When in Rome you don't do as the Romans do. You do as Mussolini says. The League of Nations may be fast but Mussolini's Fascist. Incidentally, when these sanctions become effective, they'll be calling it the League of Nations.

THEY blame the British delegate to the League of Nations for the sanctions. "Eden me wrong" is the latest Italian theme song. And in the Garden of Eden's Sir Samuel Hoare and Mr. Stanley Baldwin are the prickly pear. Oh, yes, and the latest theme song about Solonias is "He ain't gonna reign no mo', no mo'."

Which is all we have to say about Ethiopia. But Abyssinia.

JUNIOR LAWN BOWLS SKIP OUTPLAYS SHANGHAI

BIG GATES BUT FEW WINS.

ARSENAL ELATED & DESPONDENT.

WEAKNESS IN THE FORWARDS?

London, Sept. 24. If it is possible for a man to be elated and despondent at once, George Allison must be undergoing the experience. The golden stream pours into Highbury with undiminished fervour, while attendances elsewhere are beginning to slump. And still victories, which are the lifeblood of all professional teams, continue to elude Arsenal. Two wins in seven attempts is hardly championship form.

In four home matches since the season opened less than a month ago, 214,000 people have seen Arsenal play and the gross receipts are roughly £15,000. Many Third Division clubs do not draw that amount in a season. Here are the illuminating figures:—

69,000v. Sunderland.
40,000v. Grimsby.
63,000v. Wednesday.
64,000v. Manchester City.

In the whole history of the game one cannot recall any club drawing such colossal crowds in four consecutive league matches. No wonder Arsenal are sensitive about that £15,000 profit last season. You can now watch for redoubled efforts to secure Walker, who scored two of Heart of Midlothian's eight goals on Saturday.

Here are some opinions on the Arsenal's present play:—
Sunday Dispatch: "It is difficult to be dogmatic about what is wrong with Arsenal, but it is certainly crazy to re-organise a forward line which scored six goals against Grimsby—and earned every one. Davidson and James are too much of a machine even for the long pants, both effect—and Cliff Bastin is not the Bastin we used to know. Bastin, I am afraid, has been recalled too soon. Arsenal should restore the Bessley-Bowden wing and partner Milne with James on the left."

News Chronicle: "There are signs that Arsenal's predominance in the First Division is on the wane. It is many years since Manchester City won at Highbury, yet they well and truly conquered the champions on Saturday. It seems that the Arsenal forwards are the main cause of the trouble. Does this mean that more huge sums of money will be expended before the season is much older? The Arsenal-Manchester City match was, however, one of the best of the season, except that a referee irritated players and spectators alike by his persistence in stopping the play for infringements which were not apparent. He also committed one serious blunder when he gave the Arsenal a penalty. I think he must have realised this from remarkable demonstrations by the crowd. Fancy spectators protesting against a penalty given to the home side! At least, it says a good deal for their sense of fairness. The incident occurred immediately in front of me. James lost his balance and fell without Dule coming in contact with him. Bastin scored with the kick, and then James put on a second goal. In this way the goals Herd and Tossell had obtained earlier were equalised."

Manchester City's win at Highbury was their first for 12 years, and incidentally Chelsea won at West Bromwich for the first time in 23 years.

H. Williams, head groundsman to the Derbyshire County Cricket Club at Derby, has been appointed to a similar position with the Lancashire C.C.C. at Old Trafford.

TENNIS EXHIBITION IN MANILA

COCHET TOURING PHILIPPINES

COMING TO H. K. LATER

Manila, Oct. 8. Henri Cochet, famed French tennis star who played a series of matches here, will sail for the south to-day on the s.s. Mayon for exhibition matches there. He will be accompanied by Mme. Cochet, Leonardo Gavia, Jr., Juanito Gavia, Francisco Aragon and Rodrigo Diaz. They will play in Bacolod, Occidental Negros and may also appear in Iloilo and Cebu.

Henri Cochet concluded his tennis engagement in Manila yesterday afternoon by defeating Lope Yngayo, at one time No. 1 ranking player, and national champion of the Philippines, in three sets, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1. Despite the one-sided score, Yngayo displayed a nice brand of tennis considering that he has been out of active tournament competition for the past three or four years.

Yngayo who turned professional two or three years ago when he became tennis coach at the University of the Philippines, had difficulty with his forehand shots. He lacked the steadiness which characterised his play when he was the Islands' top ranking net star. He made some fine rallies, however, and on several occasions he made some beautiful place shots to score against the great French ace. Yngayo won the second and sixth games of the first set. He took the first and fourth games of the second set. In the third set he won the opening game on his own service but dropped the next six in a

WORPLESDON FOURSOMES

MISS WETHERED NOT TO PLAY

Miss Joyce Wethered, who has won the Worpleston mixed foursomes seven times with six different partners, is not going to play this year. Miss Wethered, who had been entered with the Hon. T. W. Coke, is due in England from her American tour only a few days before the start of the tournament, and she feels that she will have too little time for practice. It is possible that Miss Wethered will play next year with the Hon. T. W. Coke as partner.

The tournament this year will be extended to five days. Miss Molly Gourlay and T. A. Torrance, who won last year, have again entered, while Roger Wethered will play with Mme. Lacoste. France will also be represented by Mlle. Francine Tolle, who is to partner Brig-General A. C. Critchley.

H. M. Lawson, the Hampshire fast bowler will play for the county as a professional next season.

row as Cochet tightened up on his playing.

GOING TO HONGKONG

After Henri Cochet returns from the southern Islands he will sail for Hongkong where he will play a series of exhibitions before proceeding to Australia. He proposed to take Francisco Aragon to Hongkong and China as an exhibition partner but no definite arrangement has yet been made.

During Cochet's exhibition matches in Manila he has beaten the Islands' outstanding players. Francisco Aragon, No. 2 ranking, was the only player to extend him. Aragon won one set from the visitor and in a return match battled him to 7-6, 9-7 and 6-4.

J. C. CHALMERS SHOWS DEADLY FORM

NEARLY DEFEATS NORTHERNERS OFF HIS OWN BOWLING

MOST BRILLIANT PLAYER VISITORS HAVE MET IN COLONY

(By "Sagax")

A marvellous display of bowling by J. C. Chalmers, who skipped the Second Division rink in a lawn bowls match against the Shanghai Interporters on the Taikoo R.C. green yesterday, all but won for the local side a glorious victory against the northerners but the listless bowls played by the other three Colony representatives negated all efforts of the Taikoo player and the junior side lost by 23 shots to 17.

Taking the form of all the players who have appeared against Shanghai during the present visit, there can be little doubt in the minds of followers of the game who have watched each match as it was played, that J. C. Chalmers has been the most brilliant exponent of the game that the visitors have thus far encountered, not excluding even the Shanghai Interporters in either Thursday's or Saturday's fixtures.

It was Chalmers against Shanghai yesterday and that the local side was able to hold the visitors to a final margin of six shots was a great tribute to the Taikoo R.C. and former interport player. If any of the other three players had rendered any support at all the Shanghai team, on yesterday's form, would have suffered the ignominy of tasting defeat at the hands of a junior division quartette.

SHANGHAI HELD

For the first half of the game the Colony players, or I should say, Chalmers, held the Shanghai team to low scores and at one stage the junior side led by 15-11. It was only in the closing ends that the visitors crept ahead when Chalmers, through lack of support, weakened slightly and allowed the visitors to chalk up twelve shots on the last seven heads, during which Hongkong scored only two, on the 19th head.

Chalmers was able to control every shot almost to perfection and when he was not driving he was drawing with such deadly accuracy that time and again he was able to change the entire situation, after giving Hongkong shots when the visitors had been leading three or four, or he was able to save shots when the visitors were threatening to register big points.

Always it was Chalmers who was the player against whom the Shanghai team was competing. The other three players were never in the picture, except for occasional brilliant shots by Way, the local No. 2.

Bright was absolutely off form and if one has never seen him play before one immediately wonders how he ever came to have been selected and the same applied to Basto who sent down about four good woods during the entire afternoon. The Club de Recreio player's failures made the task all the harder for Chalmers but it seemed that the harder the task the more brilliant was the local skip able to play.

GLOVER AND MUNRO

True, Shanghai relied only on two of the players but the other two at least gave the rink better support than did any of the three first men representing the Hongkong four. Train, at No. 2, played his best game of the series and was constantly lying against the Jack. He found little opposition from Way and was often drawing shots for the side. Charlie Richards was in one of his deadly moods and although there were occasions when he was missing shots he was rarely far off his objective and as No. 3 he helped to make it possible for the visitors to tie big counts almost every time that the skips went to bowl.

Nether Glover, at lead, nor Munro, as skip, was able to show anything like the form of the Interport matches. Glover, however, always had the better of Bright but merely because of the Hongkong player's weakness.

Munro could not rival the brilliance of Chalmers and was fortunate that Train and Richards were able to give him all the support he required. Occasionally he sent down a good wood but he was never as effective as is required of a skip.

To-day the Shanghai bowlers meet the Craigengower C.C. and Indian R.C. on the former's green at 3 p.m., this being the time at which all the remaining matches will be commenced. The Craigengower C.C. and Indian R.C. will be represented by D. M. Khan, A. R. Dallah, H. Deer and R. Basa.

AMERICANS ON TOUR

Ireland defeated the United States in a women's lacrosse match at Dublin recently by 12 goals to 2. In the first half Ireland led by 5 goals to 2, the scorers being Darley (2), Young (2) and Bryce-Smith for Ireland, and Schuyler (2) for the United States.

Ireland were much the faster in the second half and seven more goals were added by Wilson (2), McCath (8), Dunlop and Darley.

ALBERT HOWE IN SHANGHAI

CAPTAIN OF CLUB FOOTBALLERS

ELECTED FOR THE COMING SEASON

A. G. Howe, former Hongkong Interporter and considered one of the best forwards in China, was elected Captain of the Shanghai Football Club's first eleven, at the Club's Annual meeting held at the Rowing Club last Wednesday evening.

The inclusion of Howe in this year's lineup has greatly altered the Football Club's outlook for the season and with the addition of promising material in the shape of new blood as well as past members who have decided to take an active part, the Club is anticipating one of the most successful seasons in the first division for many years.

Led by a veteran of Howe's reputation, the Club should find little difficulty this year in staving that long needed recovery which they have been trying to make for a number of seasons and if luck favours them there can be no reason why the Shanghai Football Club should not reassume its former position in the realm of local soccer.

Sir John Brennan was re-elected President and R. Grimshaw, T. L. Rawsthorne, J. G. Weeks and G. Forshaw, Vice-presidents. J. A. Ewing and G. H. Mahon were named treasurer and secretary respectively for the coming year.

The general committee for 1936 was composed of the following:—A. G. Sinclair, L. F. Stokes, F. Shaffer, and G. Mitchell. Burgess and G. S. Kimber have been elected to serve on the selection committee. First XI: Captain, A. G. Howe. Vice-Captain, G. Medley. 2nd XI: Captain, C. H. Mahon.

SATURDAY'S CRICKET TRIAL REVIEWED EVERYBODY BEING GIVEN CHANCE OF SHOWING CAPABILITIES VERY LITTLE GOT FROM THE MATCH

(By R. Abbit)

A further trial game was played at the Hongkong Cricket Club ground on Saturday last, and it is particularly clear how much attention the Selection Committee are paying to ensuring that everyone with the slightest claims to a trial gets his chance.

In a season like this, one has a pretty good knowledge of the general abilities of most players, and everyone will get at least one chance. Unfortunately, there is so little time before the date on which we play Shanghai, that only the more proven players can hope for extended trials, I fancy. But on Saturday last no less than ten new names appeared in the list. Captain Welch, Elvin, A. T. Lee, G. R. Sawyer, H. W. Baines, E. R. Duckitt, F. A. Zimmerman, W. C. Hung, T. E. Pearce and F. Baker came in while A. C. I. Bowker, E. C. Fincher, L. T. Rido, Major Bonavia, C. C. Garthwaite, F. D. Pereira, N. McNis, A. H. Madar, F. Goodwin and A. W. Ramsay stood down.

NO OVAL WICKET!

The trial was played on a wicket which appeared to be pitched very close to that used in Thursday's game, and was not too good, especially in the second innings when anything over medium appeared either to creep or to lift in a most disconcerting way. When the ball does one or the other consistently it is not nearly so difficult as when it alternates.

The start of Dunkley's side was appalling. After T. E. Pearce had taken a single to leg, Gosano, Baines was clean bowled by a beauty from the same bowler which swung a bit and beat him all ends up. A. T. Lee's first ball was a very long hop and Pearce cut it straight into the hands of Welch in the gully. (1-2-1). Pearce seemed pretty secure until a slightly slower one from Gosano, which I think came up from leg a bit, had him in two minds and took his off stick. At this period Gosano was bowling excellently and taking full advantage of the help which the pitch was giving him.

AN EARLY CHANGE

Then Elvin relieved A. T. Lee at the Law Court's end and Ballard went on for Gosano. Duckitt led out at the former and had he come out a shade would have put him into the Pavilion but he hit firm-footed and Ballard took a very high drive in front of the rails. It was a sporting crack anyway. (2-1-1). Zimmerman and Ernie Fincher then seemed to settle down, both playing free cricket though I thought the latter was a little more correct. He seems to me to have improved his style this year. They had added thirty-seven runs when a good ball from Elvin just sat on Zimmerman's bat. Six runs later Fincher was beautifully caught at short-leg by Ballard by Gosano. It was bad luck, however, as there was little wrong with the shot. The ball popped up very quickly and the fieldsmen moved like a flash and just got his left hand to it. Hung played some crisp shots but in trying to drive Ballard ballooned one to Sawyer at extra cover and a prettily judged catch was taken. Meantime Ricketts had been batting soundly enough with an occasional clump very powerfully laid on, but Ballard beat him at last. (0-4-24).

A LAST WICKET STAND

Baker hit a couple of fours, one, I fear, rather a snick, but he only stayed with Dunkley until 108 was up. Then, however, Minu came in and with two left-handers the fun began. Suffice it to say that unlike the experts of the 7—was it Muggletonians—they stopped the good ones most scientifically and hit anything pitched up 'blooming hard and blooming often.' Dunkley got 33 and then, to rub things in, declared after the undefeated last wicket stand added forty-five runs of which Minu claimed eighteen. It is queer that these Honoric stands always seem to come off at the end—or near end—of an innings.

At 4.10 p.m., Richardson and Bill Williams opened to Baker and Minu, and the first four overs only produced three singles. In the fifth over Williams got Baker to leg for two but was lbw. next ball (5-1-4). Baker was bowling very accurately and the pitch was not above suspicion, and T. A. Pearce was on the defensive. The next four overs produced a single from an overthrow off a return to the bowler, but it must be admitted that the ball was alternately keeping low and popping. Then Richardson with a square cut for two and a hook for four sent the first ten up in half an hour.

An over later Minu's analysis read (6-4-2-0). Then Hung relieved Baker and was all over the place in his first over. A long hop on his body, nearly head high, gave Pearce the chance to break his duck after playing twenty minutes of very watchful cricket, but with his usual luck next ball he got a beautiful one which just nicked the outside of his off peg. (17-2-1). Next over Minu's first ball bowled Sawyer neck and crop. (18-3-1). In Hung's second over a long hop head high and wide of the off stump got him his second wicket as for some unknown reason Welch flicked at it and was, very properly, caught at the wicket (24-4-3). Hung then gave way to Pearce after Minu had bowled another maiden. The first ball was a very long hop which Gosano lofted weakly over the bowler's head—but Pearce could not check his run soon enough to make the catch. Another long hop was nicely glanced to long leg for four. But the bowler had his revenge as he bowled Gosano off his pads.

A CONFIDENT APPEAL

Hayward went in but touched one from Ricketts who had relieved Minu and a confident appeal was answered against him. (33-6-0). Mackay then joined Richardson who had defended gallantly for an hour while making fifteen. The bowling then became a little less accurate and runs came a little faster. Mackay late out Zimmerman and then straight drove him both for four and scored three more off the one over. Both batsmen began to hit the ball quite hard and a stand was made. Mackay, who perhaps got more of the bowling by the time eighty was up had overtaken Richardson who had scored thirty, but Richardson regained the lead with a couple of nice fours. At ninety, however, he had a go at Ricketts and a ball fell; as far as I could see the ball went off his pad or body, 90-7-38. He had batted well for an hour and twenty-five minutes, and hit in all six fours.

MACKAY OUT

Off Baker's next over Mackay scored ten runs before being caught off his glove from one which got up nastily. Dunkley made no mistake with the catch (100-8-40). With the two left-handers, Elvin and Ballard in, the game became very dull, though there were a few snicks and narrow squeaks. T. E. Pearce bowled the last over which the batsmen treated with the most distinguished consideration.

DEDUCTIONS

Frankly we get very little from the game. Gosano showed much improved bowling form but beyond that there was little of note. It seems clear that Dunkley is building up a reputation as a sound performer at that most important position of number nine in the batting list. And so we go on!

FRIENDLY HOCKEY

In a friendly hockey match on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon, the Punjab Regiment defeated the Club de Recreo by three goals to nil after a fast and exciting match.

The winners were the better balanced team, and their stickwork was much better than that of their opponents, who failed to combine to good effect. Two goals were netted in the first half from short corners, and the third netted in the second half.

MILITARY CRICKET

East Lanes. Easily Beat Royal Welsh Fusiliers

Brilliant bowling by Bds. Whitehead enabled the 2/East Lancashire Regiment to beat the 2/Royal Welsh Fusiliers at Cricket by 62 runs on Sunday at Sookunpo.

Batting first, the East Lanes. declared at 105 for five wickets. Lieut. J. P. Williams hitting a chanceless 77. L/Cpl. Goldworthy with 41. At one stage of the Fusiliers' innings, which realised 103 runs, Whitehead had taken five wickets for only two runs, but he finished with five for 17.

L/Sgt. Collis was the only batsman to offer any real resistance to the East Lanes. bowlers and made 23 runs. Had it not been for the extras which totalled 35, the Fusiliers' score would have been considerably lower.

SERIAL STORY

DONNA OF THE BIG TOP

by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DONNA GABRIEL, and MADELINE BIDDALE, who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters," are trapeze performers with Benfro's circus. Donna's parents, also circus performers, are dead. Five years earlier Madeline ran away from the middle-western farm where her grandfather, AMOS SIDDALE, lives. A few days before she came to play in her old home town Madeline receives a letter from her grandfather asking her to spend the weekend with him. Madeline goes. Donna and Donna considers it. When BILL SIDDALE, Madeline's cousin, comes for her, she (pretending to be the other girl) who talks to him and later goes to dinner with him.

CHAPTER II

In the dressing room Madeline was changing her costume with the assistance of one of the wild west riders who augmented her salary by acting as maid to the star performers. Madeline's eyebrows lifted at Donna's entrance. "How's the cousin?" she asked.

"Donna sat down on a folding stool and kicked off the heavy carpet slippers that covered her 'soft soles.' Dextrously she slipped from one costume into another. If she had heard her partner's question she gave no heed to it for she did not reply.

"It's funny your folks never write to but one of you girls," giggled Madeline's assistant. "Or maybe they write to you together?"

"They do," Madeline informed her. "Beat it, Ruth. I can finish alone."

"What's Bill like?" Madeline demanded when she and Donna were alone.

"What you'd expect. A young hayseed. You'd never see him for dust, but," Donna smiled, "I like him. He was so embarrassed it was funny. I guess we were both embarrassed. I'm going to have supper with him after the show."

"I suppose the lights shocked him out of a year's growth?"

"No, I don't think so. After all, bathing suits are so common that lights shouldn't mean anything."

"Bathing suits!" Madeline sniffed. "Where would Bill Sidale see a woman in a bathing suit? Outside of Little Creek there isn't a place to swim within 50 miles and a woman over went swimming in Little Creek."

"I don't think," mused Donna, "that your cousin has lived all his life in this part of the country. We didn't talk very long but somehow I got that impression. You say you've never seen him—"

"There were some Siddales in Indianapolis," Madeline said. "Bill probably belongs to that branch of the family. But if he does why should he be on Grandpa's farm? I can't imagine a city man caring for farm life."

"That's our cue," Donna said suddenly, not at all sorry to interrupt the discussion of the young man she had just met. Again she thrust her feet into the canvas slippers, flung a black cloak about her and left the dressing room. Madeline followed. They walked through a lane of dressing rooms, passing small groups of performers who smiled or ignored them. The "cue," a strain of music, informed them that in two minutes they must be ready to make their entrance.

As she tripped lightly across the arena Donna gave a swift glance at the rows of seats, knowing full well that under the blazing lights she could not distinguish Bill Sidale from any other person.

Both girls discarded their cloaks and slippers. With deft overhead movements Donna swung her lithe, perfect body up a swinging rope that led to the flying trapeze. Once she was in position there, Madeline did likewise. The two worked without nets, a reckless disregard of life and limb.

Donna knew that when she swung herself from the trapeze, to grasp it with her dexterous instep an instant later, Con Dada always stood in the wing of the entrance, waiting her cue. To him the trapeze act was sheer defiance of the laws of gravity, while his own was merely the routine of existence. Donna, on the other hand, thought Con's performance with the floor by far the most dangerous feat in the circus.

To-day Con's presence irritated her. She found it difficult to keep her mind on the count that was as necessary as the bars beneath her. Again and again her thoughts returned to the brief encounter with Bill Sidale. She wondered what he had thought of her—she who had never cared for any man's opinion before. She wondered how the trapeze act appeared to him, and if he really believed her to be his cousin. Suddenly Madeline's sharp whisper, "Snap out of it! You almost missed me!" brought an end to these speculations.

At last it was over—the chariot races, the wild west show, the grand finale. Lights were extinguished and the audience departed. Donna dressed quickly. She slipped into a pressed silk frock that had been hanging in a closet for years. Her hat was a large straw hat with a wreath of daisies. Without makeup she looked younger than her 20 years, more frail and very lovely.

"Give him a kiss for me," Madeline laughed as they parted.

"I may tell him the truth," Donna retorted.

"If you do you'll just miss your party, for nothing would induce me to go to that farm!"

Bill was waiting at the spot Donna had designated. "Have I kept you long?" she asked, annoyed that her voice should tremble.

"Not very. It was a good show." He smiled down at her. They walked over the trampled grass to the railroad tracks and Donna said, in the distance, "What's my home?"

Bill frowned. "Not much of a home for a girl raised among trees

Again and again Donna's thoughts returned to Bill Sidale. She wondered how the trapeze act appeared to him.

and flowers and with plenty of ground around."

They did not speak again until they reached a broad walk leading towards the town. Then he said, "I wish I could persuade you to leave the circus and stay home with your grandfather. He's getting pretty old and he talks about you all the time."

"Maybe next winter," Donna stammered. "Just now it would be impossible."

"I suppose show life is thrilling. At least it looks that way, sitting where I did. But there can be a lot of interest around a farm, too. And it would only be while the old man is alive. I thought I'd hate the farm, and at first I did hate giving up what I was doing to settle down in the back woods. I'm sure, though, that if the place were mine I'd get a real kick out of trying to make it the best in the country."

"What were you doing?" Donna asked.

"Studying medicine. I'd have graduated this year if I hadn't quit. When Grandfather went blind some one had to be with him besides—"

"Blind," Donna gasped. "Didn't you know? Didn't you tell the letter?"

"No, I didn't know," she shivered.

He looked at her sharply. "Mrs. Platter said she wrote you the same time she wrote me, but I don't trust that woman. She has her eye on Grandfather—I call him that—and would like to marry him, blind or not. Naturally she doesn't like me, for I see through her schemes."

"Why is she?"

"She's a housekeeper. Surely you remember her! When her husband was alive she lived up the road about three miles. After you left she came over to stay with Grandfather."

"The name—er—slipped my memory."

"I suppose so. You've met so many persons in the last five years. I've a car in town but I reckon we'll have to walk to the square. I hope you don't mind."

Blind! Did Madeline know her grandfather was blind? Did she know that a woman who might discover instantly that Donna was an impostor was the housekeeper?

Donna asked hesitatingly, "You gave up your career to stay with Grandfather?"

"Some one had to."

"That was splendid of you."

Walking briskly, they reached the edge of the town. Frame houses with wide verandas, surrounded by Donna a touch of nostalgia for the life she had never known. Children romping among blooming rose bushes and old-fashioned garden flowers brought a lump to her throat.

"It's such a pretty town," she murmured.

"Yes, Lebanon is attractive. And there are some fine people living here. I've made a lot of friends."

The last statement was soon verified, for as they entered the square—four blocks of business buildings—several men called out greetings to Bill, then stared frankly at his companion.

Assisted by Sir Guy Standing, Ann Sheridan, William Frawley, Marjorie Schuberth and others, MacMurray is cast as one of the gallant uniformed heroes of the famous "Michigan State Police

"Maybe they remember me—" Donna stammered.

"Don't think so. You're a show girl to them and therefore a curiosity. Do you recollect any of them?"

"No."

"We'll go to the hotel. There isn't a decent restaurant in town."

The public square was thronged with farmers and their families, for Saturday in Lebanon was always a holiday. The circus had brought hundreds of persons from all over the county and the Central House, the principal hotel, had more patronage than it could accommodate. Tables had been placed on the wide porch that was flush with the street, giving the place a continental appearance.

Bill elbowed through the crowd and up the porch steps. "Got places for two?" he inquired of a bright-eyed little waitress, carrying a tray of dishes.

"Howdy, Mr. Sidale. Yes, I reckon we can find a place for you. That couple is leaving now." A gaunt-faced man pushed back his chair as the waitress spoke and stalked inside to settle his bill, followed by his corpulent wife.

Bill, snatched at the vacant places, grinning boyishly at Donna as he held a chair for her. "I suppose it's the same old over the country. A circus draws everybody."

Just as the little waitress inquired if Donna would have steak or pork chops, another couple came up the stairs. Donna raised her eyes to meet the mischievous ones of Madeline whose curiosity had overcome caution.

At a discreet distance, accompanied by Ned Trafford, the doors canvasser, she had followed her partner.

Donna could not suppress a gasp of dismay. In a frock very similar to her own and wearing a hat that was an exact replica of Donna's, the resemblance between the two girls was so striking that Bill could not help but notice it. It would be like Madeline to come to the table and demand an introduction, and Donna knew that if this happened she could not continue the deception. Suddenly she wanted to spend that week-end in the country more than she had ever wanted to do anything in her life. The good opinion and respect of the sunburnt boy in giant slippers beside her became the most important thing in the world.

"What's the matter?" Bill asked.

"Nothing. I just saw my partner and I thought she—"

Madeline passed by. She grinned impudently, swept a keen glance toward Bill and under her breath, whispered to Donna, "Con is roaring like one of his cats." Then with her arm linked in Ned Trafford's she continued down the aisle of tables.

It all happened so suddenly that Bill scarcely saw Madeline's face but he did hear what she said. Though his acquaintance with Donna had begun less than six hours previous he demanded, as if well within his rights, "Who is Con?"

"Oh, you saw him. He's in the animal act."

Donna laughed gaily. "Of course not."

"But he'd like to be, huh?"

"Porpoise."

"Lilies of the Field"

The British and Dominions super-

"Lilies of the Field," starring Winfred Shutter and directed by Norman

Walker, forms a big attraction at the King's Theatre on Wednesday. Based on the brilliant comedy of the same title by John Hastings Turner, the film has been adapted by Dion

Titherage with the assistance of the author and has been given a bright

new treatment with special music.

The result is a magnificent humorous entertainment served up with all the technical resources at B. and D.'s command. Winfred Shutter plays a plausibly contrasted role of a lively and ultra-modern young thing who screened on Wednesday and Thursday.

"Baboon," it is said, outdistances anything the Johnstons have yet brought back from unexplored and savage lands. Among the amazing sights promised in "Baboon" are a savage duel between a marauding leopard and a wart hog, the wild stampede of a vast horde of elephants, thousands strong; war between armies of glant baboons and battalions of fierce monkeys—fighting to the death; the Johnstons' plane landing in a river infested with crocodile killers; the attack of roaring, fearless lions up the embankment of a grounded plane and its human occupants. These and other thrilling and astonishing episodes have been so far as is known, filmed for the first time in the history of the screen.

"The Crusades"

Cecil B. DeMille, master showman

in creating his greatest picture "The Crusades," which closes at the Queen's Theatre to-day, gives exhibitors super-de-luxe entertainment, intriguing the eye with spectacle, assailing the heart with tender romance and exalting the moral sense with religious passion. Filled with inspiration, the production humanizes the primitive virtues to stir and elevate,

with each moment enriched by taste and beauty. Aside from pomp and majesty, glitter and gallop, a love clash between Henry Wilcoxon, as

Richard the Lion Hearted and Loretta

Young, as Princess of Navarre, shines with warmth and fervour. Set against this alliance, C. Henry Gordon

as Philip of France, insists Richard marry his sister, Katherine DeMille, per his royal pledge. Ian Keith,

HONGKONG IN 1934

WHAT GOVERNMENT TELLS THE WORLD

The annual report on Hongkong in 1934, published by the Stationery Office, London, says that local trade was dull during the year, and the improvement of business of which there were faint signs at the end of 1933 did not materialise. The chief causes remained the same—the world depression and the over-growing wall of high tariffs imposed by the Chinese and other Governments,—whilst a new factor hindering exports to foreign countries was the steadily maintained appreciation of the silver dollar in terms of gold and sterling. The hoarding and knitting trades were particularly hard hit, and several large and well-established firms were compelled to close. The heavy industries, such as shipbuilding and engineering, also suffered from lack of business, but, on the other hand, several smaller industries such as those involving the manufacture of felt hats, sweaters, electric torches and dry batteries, mosquito sticks, &c., appeared to be flourishing. The printing and book-making industries and the rubber-shoe trade had a fair measure of prosperity and although several factories closed others were opened.

Discussing the "gloomy state of trade," the report says that in terms of Hongkong currency imports during 1934 declined by 17 per cent on 1933 and 33 per cent on 1932, while exports declined 19 per cent on 1933 and 51 per cent on 1932. In terms of sterling imports declined 6.5 per cent on 1933 and 22.7 per cent on 1932, while exports declined 0.5 per cent on 1933 and 20 per cent on 1932. It is estimated that the quantum of the import trade declined by 10 per cent as compared with 1932, and 25 per cent as compared with 1931, but, of necessity, the volume of imports into the colony cannot be calculated accurately on account of the lack of a suitable unit of quantity and the fact that many commodities are declared by value only.

China is normally one of the largest markets for Hongkong manufactured goods and singletons, but the high China Customs tariff has seriously affected this trade. At one time India also was a very large buyer of Hongkong-made goods, but owing to competition from cheaper Japanese-made articles, shipments to India have considerably decreased. There have been increased shipments of hosiery to the British West Indies, but this increase is small compared with losses in the China and Indian markets. Exports of singletons have not been so adversely affected. The yarn used in the manufacture of the lower grades of cotton knitted goods is imported from North China and India, but the higher grades from the United Kingdom.

As locally manufactured canvas shoes with rubber soles qualify for Imperial Preference, an impetus has been given to shipments to other parts of the British Empire, particularly the United Kingdom and the British West Indies, whose imports in 1934 were more than treble those in previous years. The rubber used in the manufacture of these shoes is imported from the Straits Settlements. Formerly most of the canvas used originated from the United States, but now a large proportion of British canvas is used.

Darwin's Theory Denounced

PROFESSOR CALLS IT "COMPLETE FRAUD"

Darwin's theory of natural selection—the adequacy of which was questioned by Professor F. Balfour-Browne—was roundly denounced as a complete fraud at the British Association meeting at Norwich last month.

The declaration to this effect by Professor E. W. MacBride, F.R.S., of the Imperial College of Science, South Kensington, caused something of a sensation, and in discussing it afterwards a zoologist described it as "a spatter thrown in the works."

Professor MacBride roundly declared:

"The doctrine of natural selection as the cause of evolution is a complete fraud, a complete fallacy."

"Of course, in one sense natural selection must be true, because it is obvious to a child in the early stages of the elementary school that children of the next generation must be born from grown-up people."

"It is obvious that the next generation must have arisen from those of a former one, so that the survival of the fittest simply means that the survivors survive. The doctrine of natural selection means evolution by chance."

Criticisms Justified.

"All the attacks of Darwin's opponents based on this interpretation were justified. They were just as true when made fifty years ago as now."

"The reason they did not prevail was a psychological reason. Darwin's 'Origin of Species' coincided with a general feeling of revolt against traditional authority, and this theory gave to the younger members of the community a splendid stick with which to beat Moses. (Laughter.) If one raised these objections they were howled down."

"But the doctrine does resolve into chance and nothing else." Professor MacBride said that if half was transmitted in small degree to the child, the whole problem of evolution was solved.

Professor Sir E. D. Poulton, one of those who answered Professor MacBride, declared that Professor MacBride stood against the opinion of practically the whole biological world. "We admire his courage, but we do not follow him in his opinions."

ATLANTIC AIR LINKS

INTERNATIONAL RIVALRY FOR BLUE RIBBON

FIVE NATIONS WILL COMPETE

London, Oct. 1.

INTERNATIONAL rivalry to be first in the air with a regular North Atlantic airmail and passenger service has become even more acute as Great Britain speeds up her own plans for a regular weekly or fortnightly air link between London and New York.

At least five nations—the United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Holland—are known to be keenly interested in establishing such a service.

British aviation authorities have been severely slated in some quarters here on the ground that Great Britain is sitting by and letting her rivals get a lead in the North Atlantic air race.

There is good reason to believe, however, that this country has no intention of lagging behind. Without any fanfares of trumpets British technicians, engineers and weather experts are working hard on preliminary survey of the probable routes to be operated and on the special planes to be used for the service.

At the present moment two separate routes are being examined—a northerly one for summer and a more southerly course for the winter months.

The northern route to be flown from the beginning of June until the end of September will total approximately 3,470 miles in three hops. They are:

London-Londonderry . . . 310 miles
Londonderry-Port Botwood 2060, miles
Port Botwood-New York 1,100 miles

The southern route to be taken in winter when chronic bad weather virtually bars out the northern one will be in four hops: London—Gibraltar—Azores—Bermuda—New York.

This route, which also has an ocean hop of over 2,000 miles, will be about 2,000 miles longer than the northern course.

If present plans materialise it will be operated alternately by Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways, which already has a regular service between New York and Bermuda.

It is understood, however, that last minute weather reports may divert planes from the northern to the southern route even in the summer months when the weather can be far from equable over the North Atlantic.

A preliminary report on the potentialities of Londonderry as a trans-Atlantic airport and seaplane base has just been made to the British Air Ministry by Maxwell Ayrton, architect of the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley in 1923. He estimated that a suitable airport could be established there for about £30,000. The Irish Free State has also put forward the claims of Galway in Free State territory as another possible port of call, at this end of the Atlantic hop.

Two experts from the British Air Ministry, I. H. McLure and M. R. Banks, have just conducted a similar survey in Newfoundland and reported in favour of Port Botwood as a seaplane base. The aerodrome will probably be at Glenwood, near Cobb's Camp.

Meanwhile, tenders have been invited for the construction of a seaplane base in Bermuda, probably on one of the smaller islands.

It has not yet been decided definitely whether aeroplane or flying boats will be used on the Imperial Airways Atlantic services. It is believed, however, that air-planes will be used on one route and flying boats on the other. The Short aircraft company is planning to build a flying boat of 200 tons and 30,000 horsepower, designed to withstand any weather normally encountered over the Atlantic. Owing to the immense size of this machine its wings would be out of reach of normal waves when it alights on the water. The wings would also be thick enough to accommodate the engines.

It is expected that the Atlantic crossing would occupy between fifteen and thirty hours, according to route taken and the strength of winds encountered. On both routes the east-to-west crossing would probably be shorter as the prevailing winds are mostly westerly.—United Press.

Carioca Not Spiritual Enough For Nazis

BALLROOMS WILL GO "ARYAN" THIS WINTER

Berlin, Oct. 1.

GERMANY'S ballrooms will go "Aryan" this winter, and ballroom experts here are frowning on such foreign importations as the "Carioca."

Under the heading, "The Days of Fashion-Foolishness are Gone," a prominent Berlin teacher of dancing deals with the dances for the coming season in the newspaper Nachtausgabe. Germans, he says, must not look forward to any new dances being introduced from abroad. They must, in conformity with the spirit of National-Socialist Germany, concentrate on perfecting the good old dances they have always danced.

This season he says, Germans will dance

The Waltz,
The Fox-trot, and
The Tango.
But not the Carioca.

This last dance he describes as "certainly an amusing dance, but in our eyes one that is grotesque and laughable, which has a negro origin and therefore does not suit the spiritual tendency of our times."

He says that the times when a different sort of dance had to be made the fashion of the season is, happily, no more in Germany.—Reuter.

Names in A Convict's Diary Hushed Up When Produced In Court

A SECRET document, written by a convict in his cell at the Old Bailey, was produced at the resumed hearing of the charges against the two Nottingham fire assessors, Ronald Alfred Relf and Harry Davis Hayden, at Bow-street Police Court, London, last week.

Harry Gould spent his time while awaiting sentence with Leopold Harris and the rest of his gang, writing out a long memorandum—virtually a diary with names and dates. This document the convict passed to Superintendent Yandell, the Scotland-yard chief, and it has been kept a close secret during the two years Gould has been in gaol. He was sentenced to six years penal servitude.

Carefully Hidden

Gould is a witness in the present case against the two assessors, and when he returned to the box the document was produced.

Only a part of the pencilled memoranda on the first page of the convict's cell notes was revealed—the rest of the tell-tale document was carefully concealed.

Mr. Roland Oliver, K.C., the leading counsel for the prosecution, disclosed the reason for this.

On the notes were a number of names, which, Mr. Oliver explained, had nothing whatever to do with the present case. The only name relevant to the hearing was that of the defendant Hayden, and for that reason he asked that the rest of the document should not be disclosed.

Counsel in the case conferred together, while the magistrate retired to his room. They studied the document closely, and when the magistrate returned to the Bench, Mr. Oliver announced that it had been fair from every point of view if any name except the relevant one, were seen.

The hush-hush diary of the man from Maidstone Gaol, still with most of its secrets unknown except to three or four persons, was then handed over to the care of the clerk of the court.

Blackmail Outburst

Gould's wife was again in court. She heard her husband twice dramatically demand the right to clear his name of a suggestion of blackmail. The convict was under cross-examination when the word blackmail was introduced.

Enemies In London

HE BLUFFED OUR NAVY

SLIPPED THROUGH BLOCKADE BY SINGING "TIPPERARY"

THE "SEA DEVIL" IS IN LONDON. COUNT FELIX VON LUCKNER ROBIN HOOD OF THE SEA. YOU KNOW HIM. THE WHOLE WORLD KNOWS HIM.

He is the huge, hawk-nosed, laughing fellow who took a sailing ship out to sea from Germany during the war, glided gaily through the dense British blockade under the very nose of Jellicoe, gained the ocean and played havoc with British and Allied shipping in the Atlantic and Pacific.

He sank £8,000,000 of Allied shipping with his old windjammer, raiding the trade routes of the oceans in the guise of an innocent trader.

He was one of the greatest menaces to shipping in the latter days of the war. Yet he escaped capture to go and raid England last month with a smile that would open the gates of a prison.

Never once in all his raids did he cause the loss of a single life. He sank dozens of ships, yet not even a ship's cat was drowned.

"I have come to raid your hearts," he said to a London press representative when he bounded down from the air-liner at Croydon.

"Ah! How did I get through the blockade?" he laughed in answer to a question.

"Well, I know the British are conservative. They believe what they see until they see they are wrong. Then they never believe you again. As I approached the Grand Fleet I was an innocent Norwegian. My old schooner was the most peaceful ship at sea.

This is the Count's boast: "I sank a good many ships, but I have this to relieve my conscience from those old days of the war—I never deprived a mother of the life of her son, a wife of her husband or a boy of his father. I took on board all the crews and passengers of the ships that I sank."

He said that the name "Sea Devil" was given to him by the British. His famous raider was the Seeadler, a Norwegian clipper formerly American-owned.

Broke The Blockade

"We broke through the blockade in the North Sea by convincing the British Fleet that we were Norwegians."

"Before we sailed out every one of us learned Norwegian. We mastered the language so that even the British—then the most cautious and suspicious people in the world—believed we were neutral Norwegians."

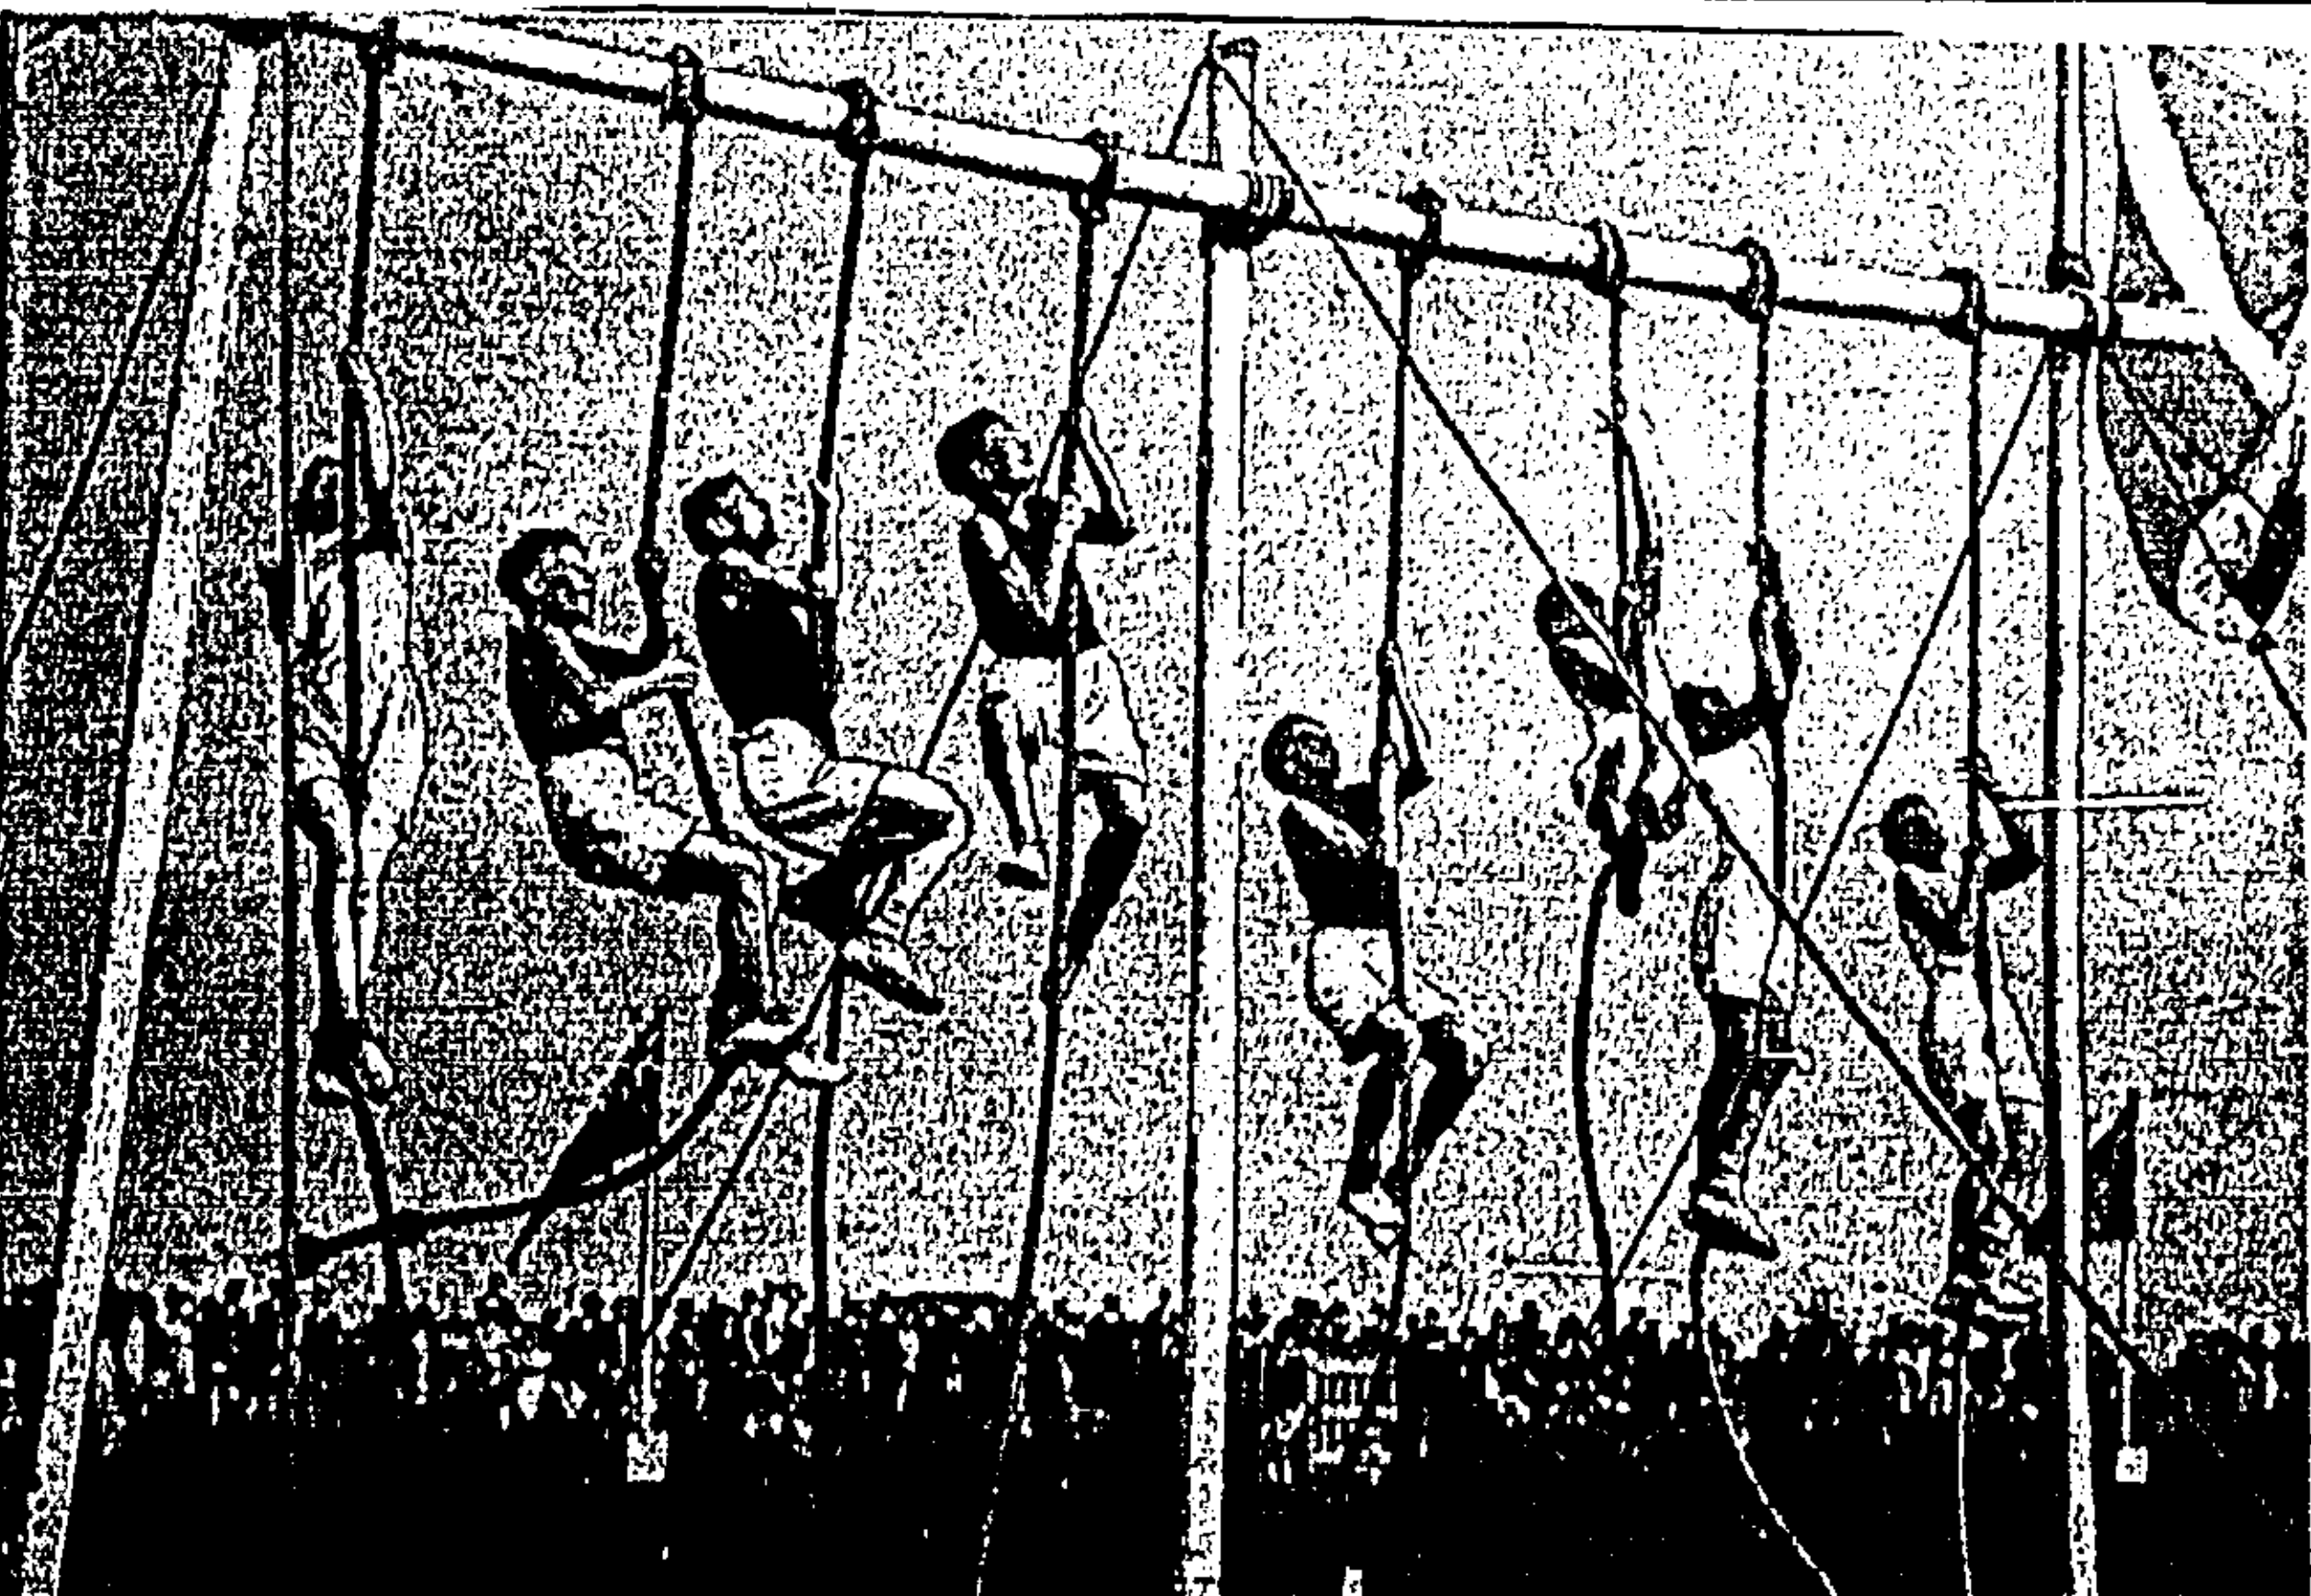

"We dressed one young sailor up as a woman. He was supposed to be my wife. As a sailor he looked rather tough, but in the clothes we made him wear he was quite a handsome woman."

We had a gramophone, and when a British ship came along to challenge us we put on a record, "It's a long way to Tipperary."

Old Foes

Count von Luckner hopes to meet some former combatants.

£20,000 Claimed For Use Of His Name

PROTEST TELEGRAM SENT IN "LOBBYING"

Columbia (South Carolina),

Oct. 1. A SUIT for £20,000 damages has been filed here by a Post Office worker as a result of the current Congressional inquiry into "lobbying" activities in Washington.

The inquiry elicited astonishing facts about the methods used by a section of "big business" in their efforts to defeat the Rayburn-Wheeler Utilities Bill.

Evidence before the Senate disclosed that thousands of false signatures, or names taken at random from telephone books, had been attached to telegrams sent to members of Congress urging them to throw out the measure limiting the powers of utility holding companies.

"Mental Anguish"

Fred Turnipseed, a local postal worker, claims £20,000 from the Broad River Power Company of Columbia, a unit of the Associated Gas and Electric system, alleging that the company had signed his name without authorization to a telegram of protest despatched to Washington.

Mr. Turnipseed further submits that the telegram was sent in "utter disregard of his rights, and with the object of promoting the company's interest to influence Senator Byrnes to vote and use his influence against enactment of the Utilities Bill," and that this caused him great mental anguish and loss of sleep.

The Turnipseed action is regarded as a test case which may establish the right of individuals whose names were used without their sanction in the campaign against the Utilities Bill to receive compensation from the companies.

Influencing Congressmen Legal circles are interested in this case because it points the way to what will probably be the one means of preventing such "lobbying" tactics in the future.

It is thought to be unlikely that any measures will be taken against those who admitted responsibility for these tactics before the Senate.

On the other hand, if individual members of the public are successful in winning cases on the same lines as Mr. Turnipseed, "lobbyists" for powerful interests will be deterred from resorting to such means of influencing Congressmen in the future.—Reuter.

The girl yesterday spent four hours outside the respirator. The world record tenancy of an artificial respirator by a patient who has recovered in three weeks.

A recent message stated that Ruby Currie, aged six years, was struggling desperately for life in the Children's Hospital.

She has been living in an artificial respirator and breathing only by artificial means.

The child is suffering from diphtheria and paralysis of the diaphragm. The hospital authorities say there is hope of her recovery.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET UPWARD YESTERDAY

New York, Oct. 14. The following reports on the New York Stock Market have been received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz:

The Wall Street Journal report on yesterday's markets: Securities today were upward and Dow-Jones Industrial average reached a new high level since 1931. Chrysler issues advanced to the highest level since 1929, whilst other automobile stocks were also upward, due to the outlook regarding sales. The Iron and Steel Institute report operations at 60.4 per cent of capacity, which has influenced the entire list. Bonds were irregular. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were also upward.

S. C. and F. New York office cables.—Securities were in renewed demand on bullish business prospects. The United Corporation has earned 2 cents per share for the quarter ended September 30th, against 5 cents per share during the corresponding quarter of last year. The Radio Corporation of America is selling a portion of its Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation security holdings to the Atlas Corporation. New York and Chicago commodity reports received through Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz: Cotton: Trade buying is confined to declines only and heavy hedge sales will probably carry prices moderately lower, when purchases are advisable. The long-range outlook is higher.

Wheat: The market declined on further beneficial rains in the Argentine, lack of export demand for Canadian wheat and the heaviness of the foreign markets. The visible supply shows an increase of 2,149,000 bushels.

Corn: The visible supply has decreased by 450,000 bushels. Sentiment is bearish.

Rubber: Some light profit-taking was in evidence. The market is steady and looks higher. Manufacturers are now showing more interest.

Special.—Steel mill activity is estimated at 60.4 per cent of capacity, against 49.7 per cent the previous week. Cram's estimate of production of Cars and Trucks in the United States and Canada during the week ended October 12 totalled 31,643 units.

scriptions to loans issued in Italy or elsewhere, directly or indirectly, by the Italian Government.

All banking credits or others destined, directly or indirectly, for the Italian Government, as well as the future execution through advances, overdrafts, or by any other means, of all loan contracts granted directly or indirectly to the Italian Government.

All loans intended directly or indirectly for public bodies or individuals, actual or hypothetical, established on Italian territory, as well as all subscriptions to any such loan issued in Italy or elsewhere.

All banking credits intended directly or indirectly for public bodies or individuals, actual or hypothetical, established on Italian territory, as well as subsequent execution, through advances, overdrafts or any other means, of all contracts for loans intended directly or indirectly to their advantage.

All issues of shares or calling up of capital to the benefit of public bodies or individuals, actual or hypothetical, established on Italian territory, as well as subscriptions to such share or calling of capital effected in Italy or elsewhere.

The Governments will forbid these operations whether effected directly or through an intermediary, of whatever nationality. Credits, however, for humanitarian or religious purposes are not included among the operations to be forbidden. Each Government is invited to make known, with as little delay as possible, to the League of Nations the steps they are prepared to take in conformity with the above mentioned dispositions.

OTHER STEPS

This afternoon, after adopting a resolution on financial measures to be recommended to the Governments, which was adopted to-night by the Co-ordinating Committee, the Committee of Eighteen decided according to press messages from Geneva, to proceed immediately with the study of all measures applicable to an embargo on raw materials and products essential for the pursuance of hostilities by Italy, as well as for the immediate cessation of Italian exports to countries which are members of the League. A sub-committee was set up for this purpose. The Committee also decided to examine in what conditions the principles of mutual aid envisaged in Paragraph 3 of Article XVI of the Covenant could be applied to economic matters, and a sub-committee was set up.

The Committee asked the sub-committees to complete their work with the greatest possible speed, and as soon as either sub-committee arrives at any definite conclusion on any point, it is to be submitted at once to the Committee of Eighteen.

In London, the progress which is being made at Geneva is regarded as most satisfactory in view of the difficulty of concerning measures, which require the unanimous support, or as nearly unanimous as can be obtained, of over fifty League members. If the present progress is maintained, it is thought not improbable that the task of the Co-ordinating Committee to make comprehensive recommendations for the first application of collective measures under Article XVI in the League may be completed by the end of the present week.—British Wire-less.

BOYCOTTING BRITAIN

SWEETING MEASURES

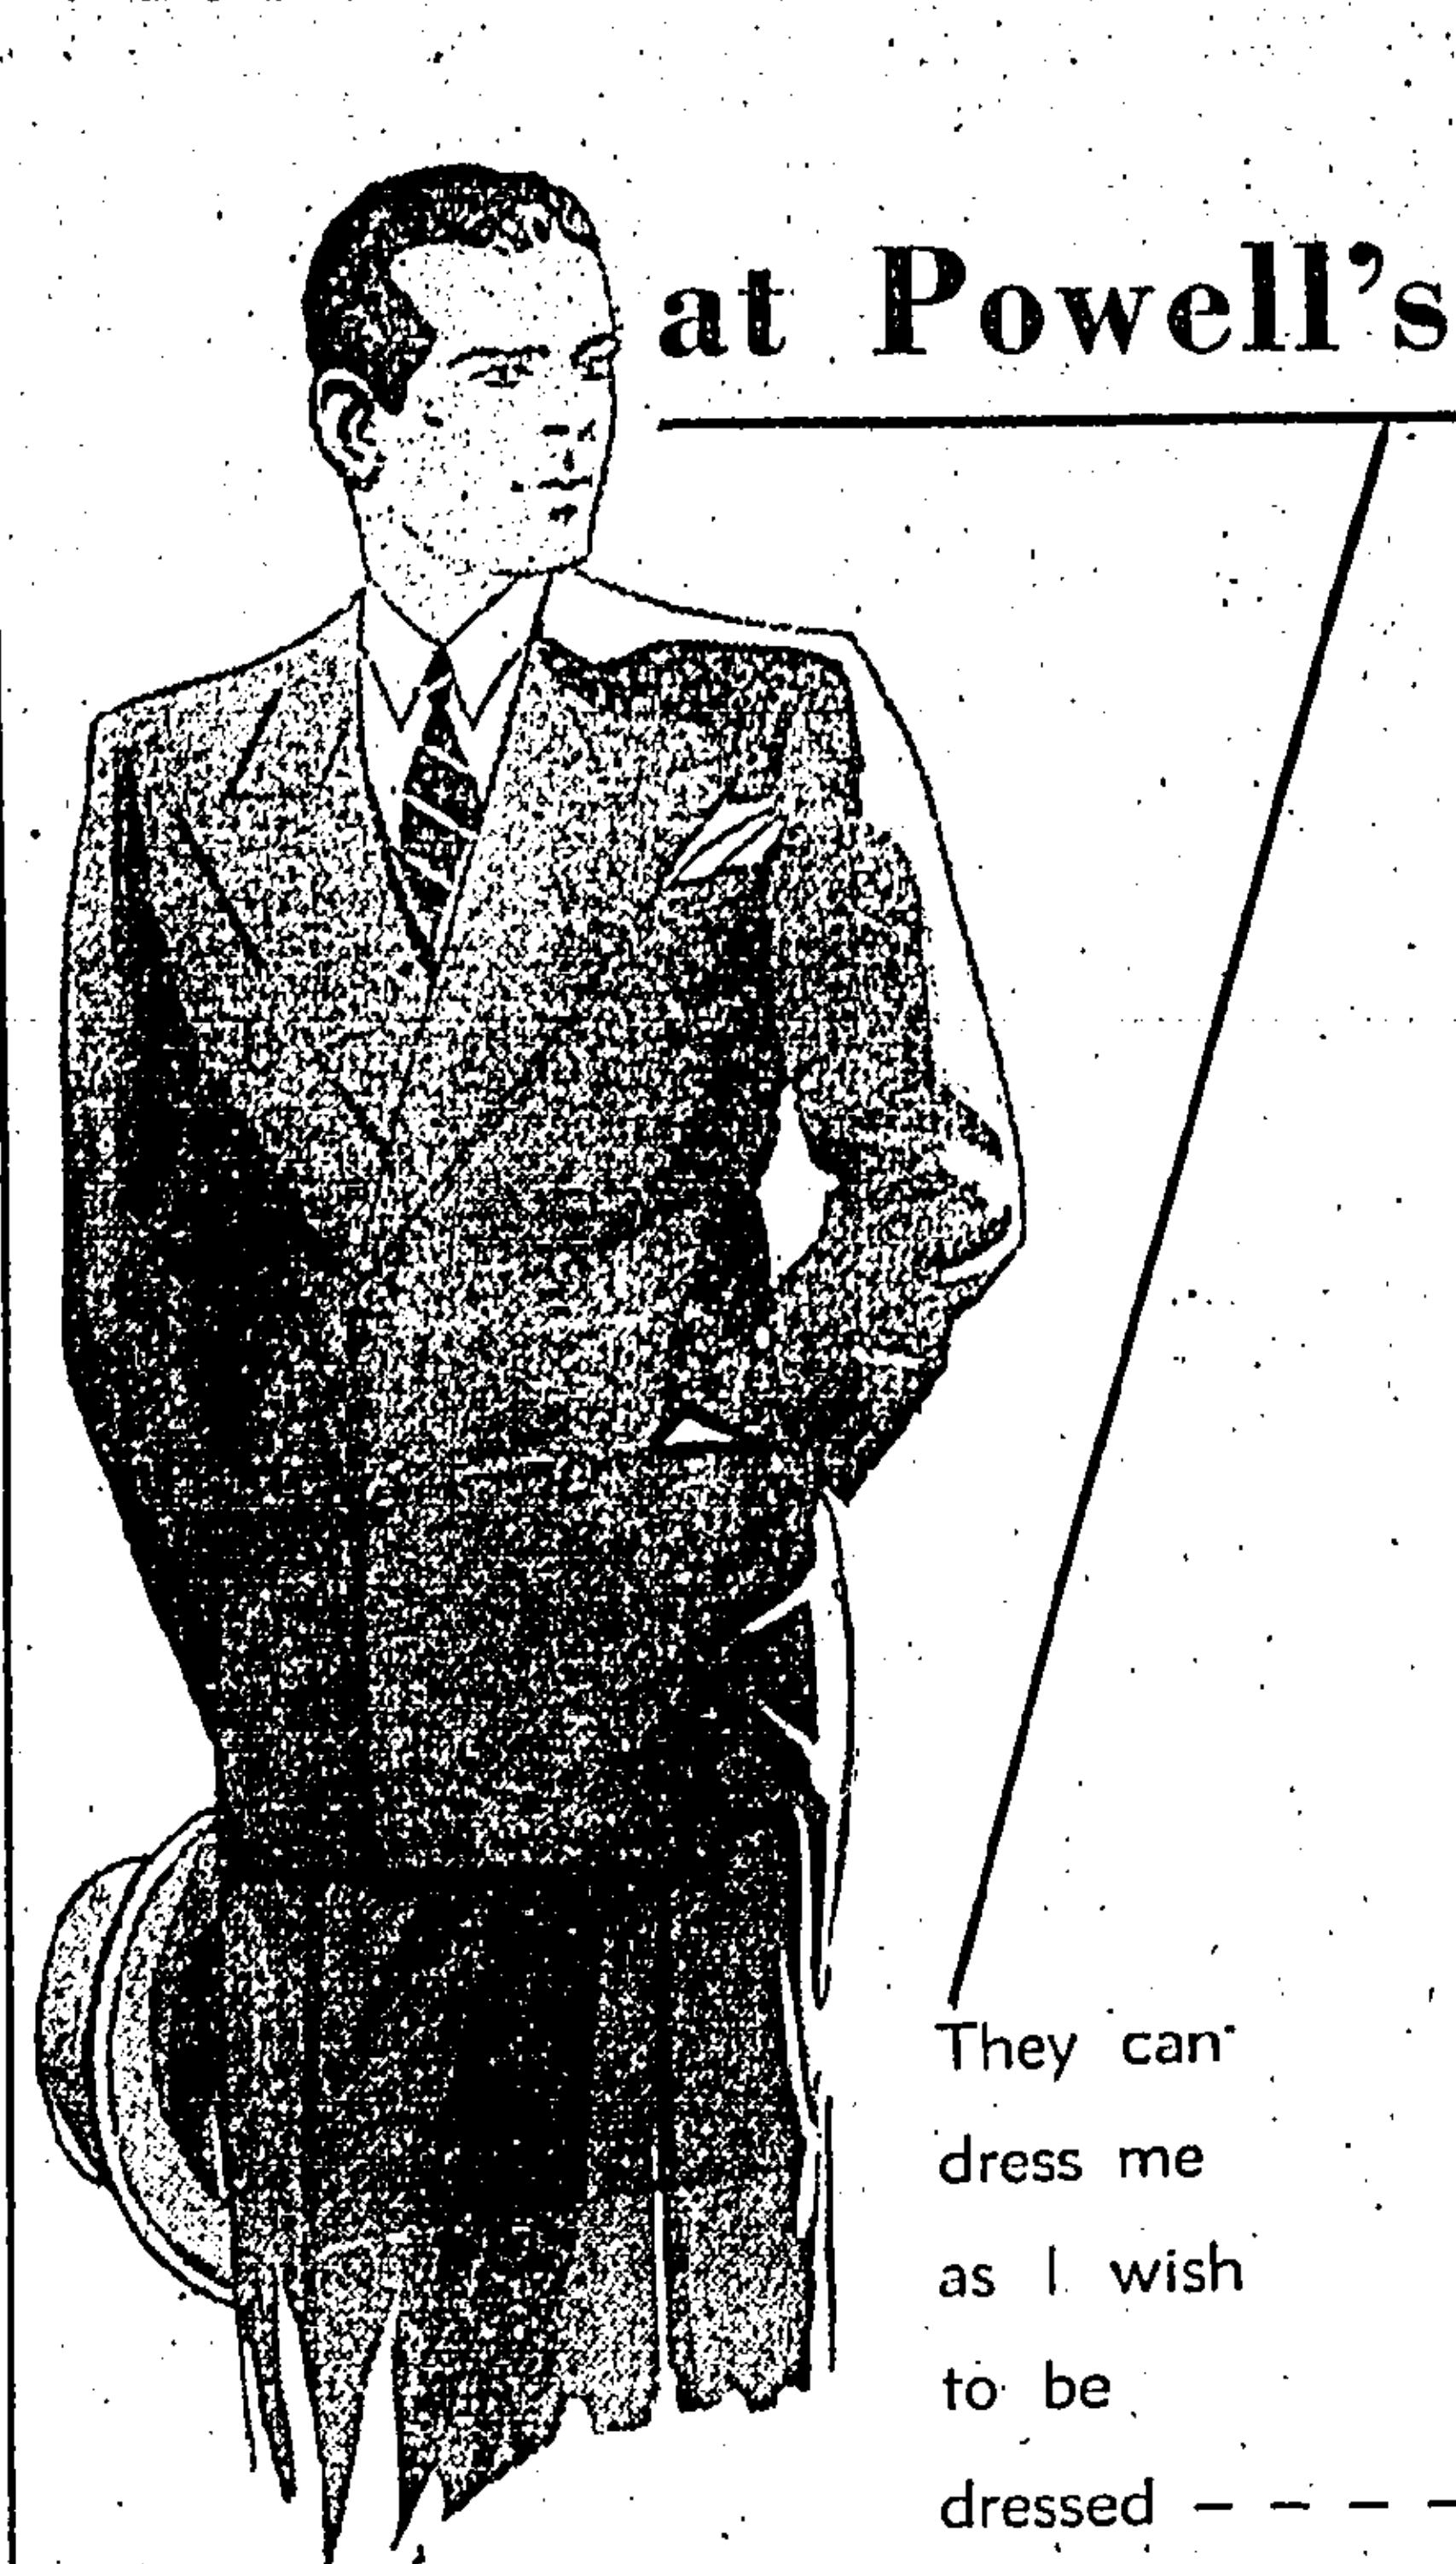

London, Oct. 14. To-night at Geneva the Co-ordinating Committee which is advising the League members with a view to facilitating the execution of their obligations under Article XVI of the League Covenant in relation to resort to war in Ethiopia by Italy, adopted unanimously, with the abstention of the representatives of Austria, Hungary and Venezuela, the following recommendations which had been prepared by the sub-committee of financial experts and subsequently approved by the Committee of Eighteen. The Governments will take immediate measures to render impossible the following operations:—All direct or indirect loans to the Italian Government or all sub-

EARLY REPORT

Ottawa, Oct. 14. Helped by unusually mild weather, Canada is recording one of the heaviest polls in her history.

An interesting feature of the general election is that seventeen clergymen and fifteen women are seeking seats in the House of Commons.

Early returns show that Liberals have captured all eleven seats in Nova Scotia. This means eight Liberal gains in this province alone. Among the defeated candidates is the youthful Minister of Fisheries, Mr. Ernst.

Liberals captured all four of the Prince Edward Island seats, which gives them three more gains.

A feature of the Eastern Canadian returns is the poor showing of Mr. H. H. Stevens' party, the Reconstructionists, who are trailing far behind the older parties. Mr. Stevens was formerly a Conservative Minister, but broke away from Mr. R. B. Bennett during the last session.—Reuter.

LOITERER BOUND OVER

CAUGHT PROWLING IN EARLY HOURS

Convicted on a charge of loitering in the city between 4.30 and 5.30 a.m. on Sunday, Wong Hung-chuen, 29, unemployed, was bound over by Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning. There was no criminal record against the accused.

Detective Sergeant T. Cushman stated that defendant was first noticed by two Chinese detectives to leave Blaky Pier and proceed slowly up Pedder Street, then turn into Queen's Road Central, down the lane by the side of the Queen's Theatre and into Des Voeux Road Central. Defendant then returned along Pedder Street into Queen's Road Central and when he turned into Chiu Loong Street, the detectives stopped him and questioned him. He stated he had been to the Sing Lung shop, 2, Wyndham Street, at 11 o'clock the previous night to see a friend who was working there in order to borrow money. Enquiries at the shop revealed that the man had never been there that night.

After An Illness Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Speed Recovery.

Recovery from an illness is often slow because the blood has become impoverished, scanty and thin; therefore to regain health and strength the main essential is to build up the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills rapidly improve the blood, and their efficacy during convalescence is strikingly proved in the case of Mrs. Margaret Brethour of Cornwall, Ontario, Canada, who gives all the credit of her quick recovery to this world famous tonic.

"I was in hospital four months after the birth of my baby," states Mrs. Brethour, "and came home weighing only sixty five pounds. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and it wasn't long until I weighed ninety five pounds, and my general health was of the best. Every spring since then I take the pills as a tonic, and would not be without them. I strongly recommend them to all mothers."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the ideal tonic in any illness which has impoverished blood as a basic cause. They also are a proved specific for nervous debility, digestive weakness, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, and the ailments peculiar to women. Chemists everywhere sell.

LEAGUE ACTION

The Italian newspapers recently have been full of anti-British propaganda of a most violent kind. Later on, perhaps, when the clear light of reason returns, the Italian people may realise how ridiculous these "hymns of hate" have been. War-time propaganda always does appear a little ludicrous to a later generation. However, there is one point to be remembered. The present outbreak is not entirely a case of spontaneous combustion. Britain's solicitude for international law and order merely fanned the smouldering fuel of Italian discontent. Italy expected to be richly rewarded for the part which she played in the Great War. Her waiting dreams were not satisfied. Since then she has cast envious eyes upon the colonial possessions, protectorates and mandates held by her neighbours. There were fears at one time in certain quarters that Italy might try to grab what she had long coveted. But these were quite unfounded. And Italy's discretion in this matter is very simply explained. The Italian Government knows without any shadow of doubt that British territory would be defended, and that Great Britain would defend it single-handed if necessary. This patent fact has a bearing upon the question of "sanctions" which the Italo-Ethiopian dispute has made topical. We are sometimes told by the isolationists that "sanctions mean war". This argument, however, requires the closest scrutiny. We have seen that Britain can defend the tiniest morsel of her territory—as well as the largest—without resort to war. The League principles, on which rest the whole of civilisation, could be defended in the same way. There is one proviso. It must be shown that those principles are taken as seriously as a piece of territory. Rightly or wrongly, Italy at first suspected that Great Britain and France would not go out of their way to uphold the Covenant of the League of Nations. Hence her defiant attitude towards the League. But the League is just as strong as its Member-States make it. Happily, no member has actually voted against the application of sanctions in the present dispute, while over fifty countries have endorsed this method of dealing with the crisis. It is naturally hoped that the first of these sanctions will impress the fact on Italy that unwarranted aggression cannot be tolerated, and that she may, even at this late hour, reconsider her policy. If not, the League members will not hesitate to bring further pressure to bear. That is the position at the moment. Time will show whether united action by League members will bring Italy around to a more reasonable frame of mind.

NOTES OF THE DAY

THE SCENE SHIFTS

The drama which is unfolded day by day on the world's stage, and which the newspapers attempt to allow their readers to glimpse, even by event, is one of constantly shifting scenes. Yesterday we were watching Ethiopia, or Rome, or London, or Paris. World interest centred there, and in the reactions to the decision which labouring statesmen were making at Geneva. To-day, since rifles cracked on the banks of the Amur River, the eyes of the world turn to the Far East again. The often-heard, and often-to-be-repeated threat, of hostilities on the Manchukuo-Soviet border is once more to the fore. What is it about? The Japanese authorities state that the Soviet frontier guards crossed the border and that the Manchukuo troops opened fire and drove them back. The Russian Government has received from its military headquarters at Khabarovsk a statement that the Manchukuo patrol crossed the frontier and deliberately attacked Soviet guards. Time was when the incident would have been sufficient to have sent these two powerful nations flying at each other's throats without a thought of seeking explanations. We have not progressed much beyond that state, but the realisation of the frightfulness of war and the paralysing cost of it, makes Governments think twice before they strike. On this occasion, at least, they are talking of a mixed commission to determine the rights and wrongs of the case. Nevertheless, such episodes are dangerous. They must not occur with too great frequency. With the world in the nervous condition it is at present such trivialities are apt to bring us much too close to flashpoint. And we in the Far East are much too close to the guns.

SPEAKING OF NEWS

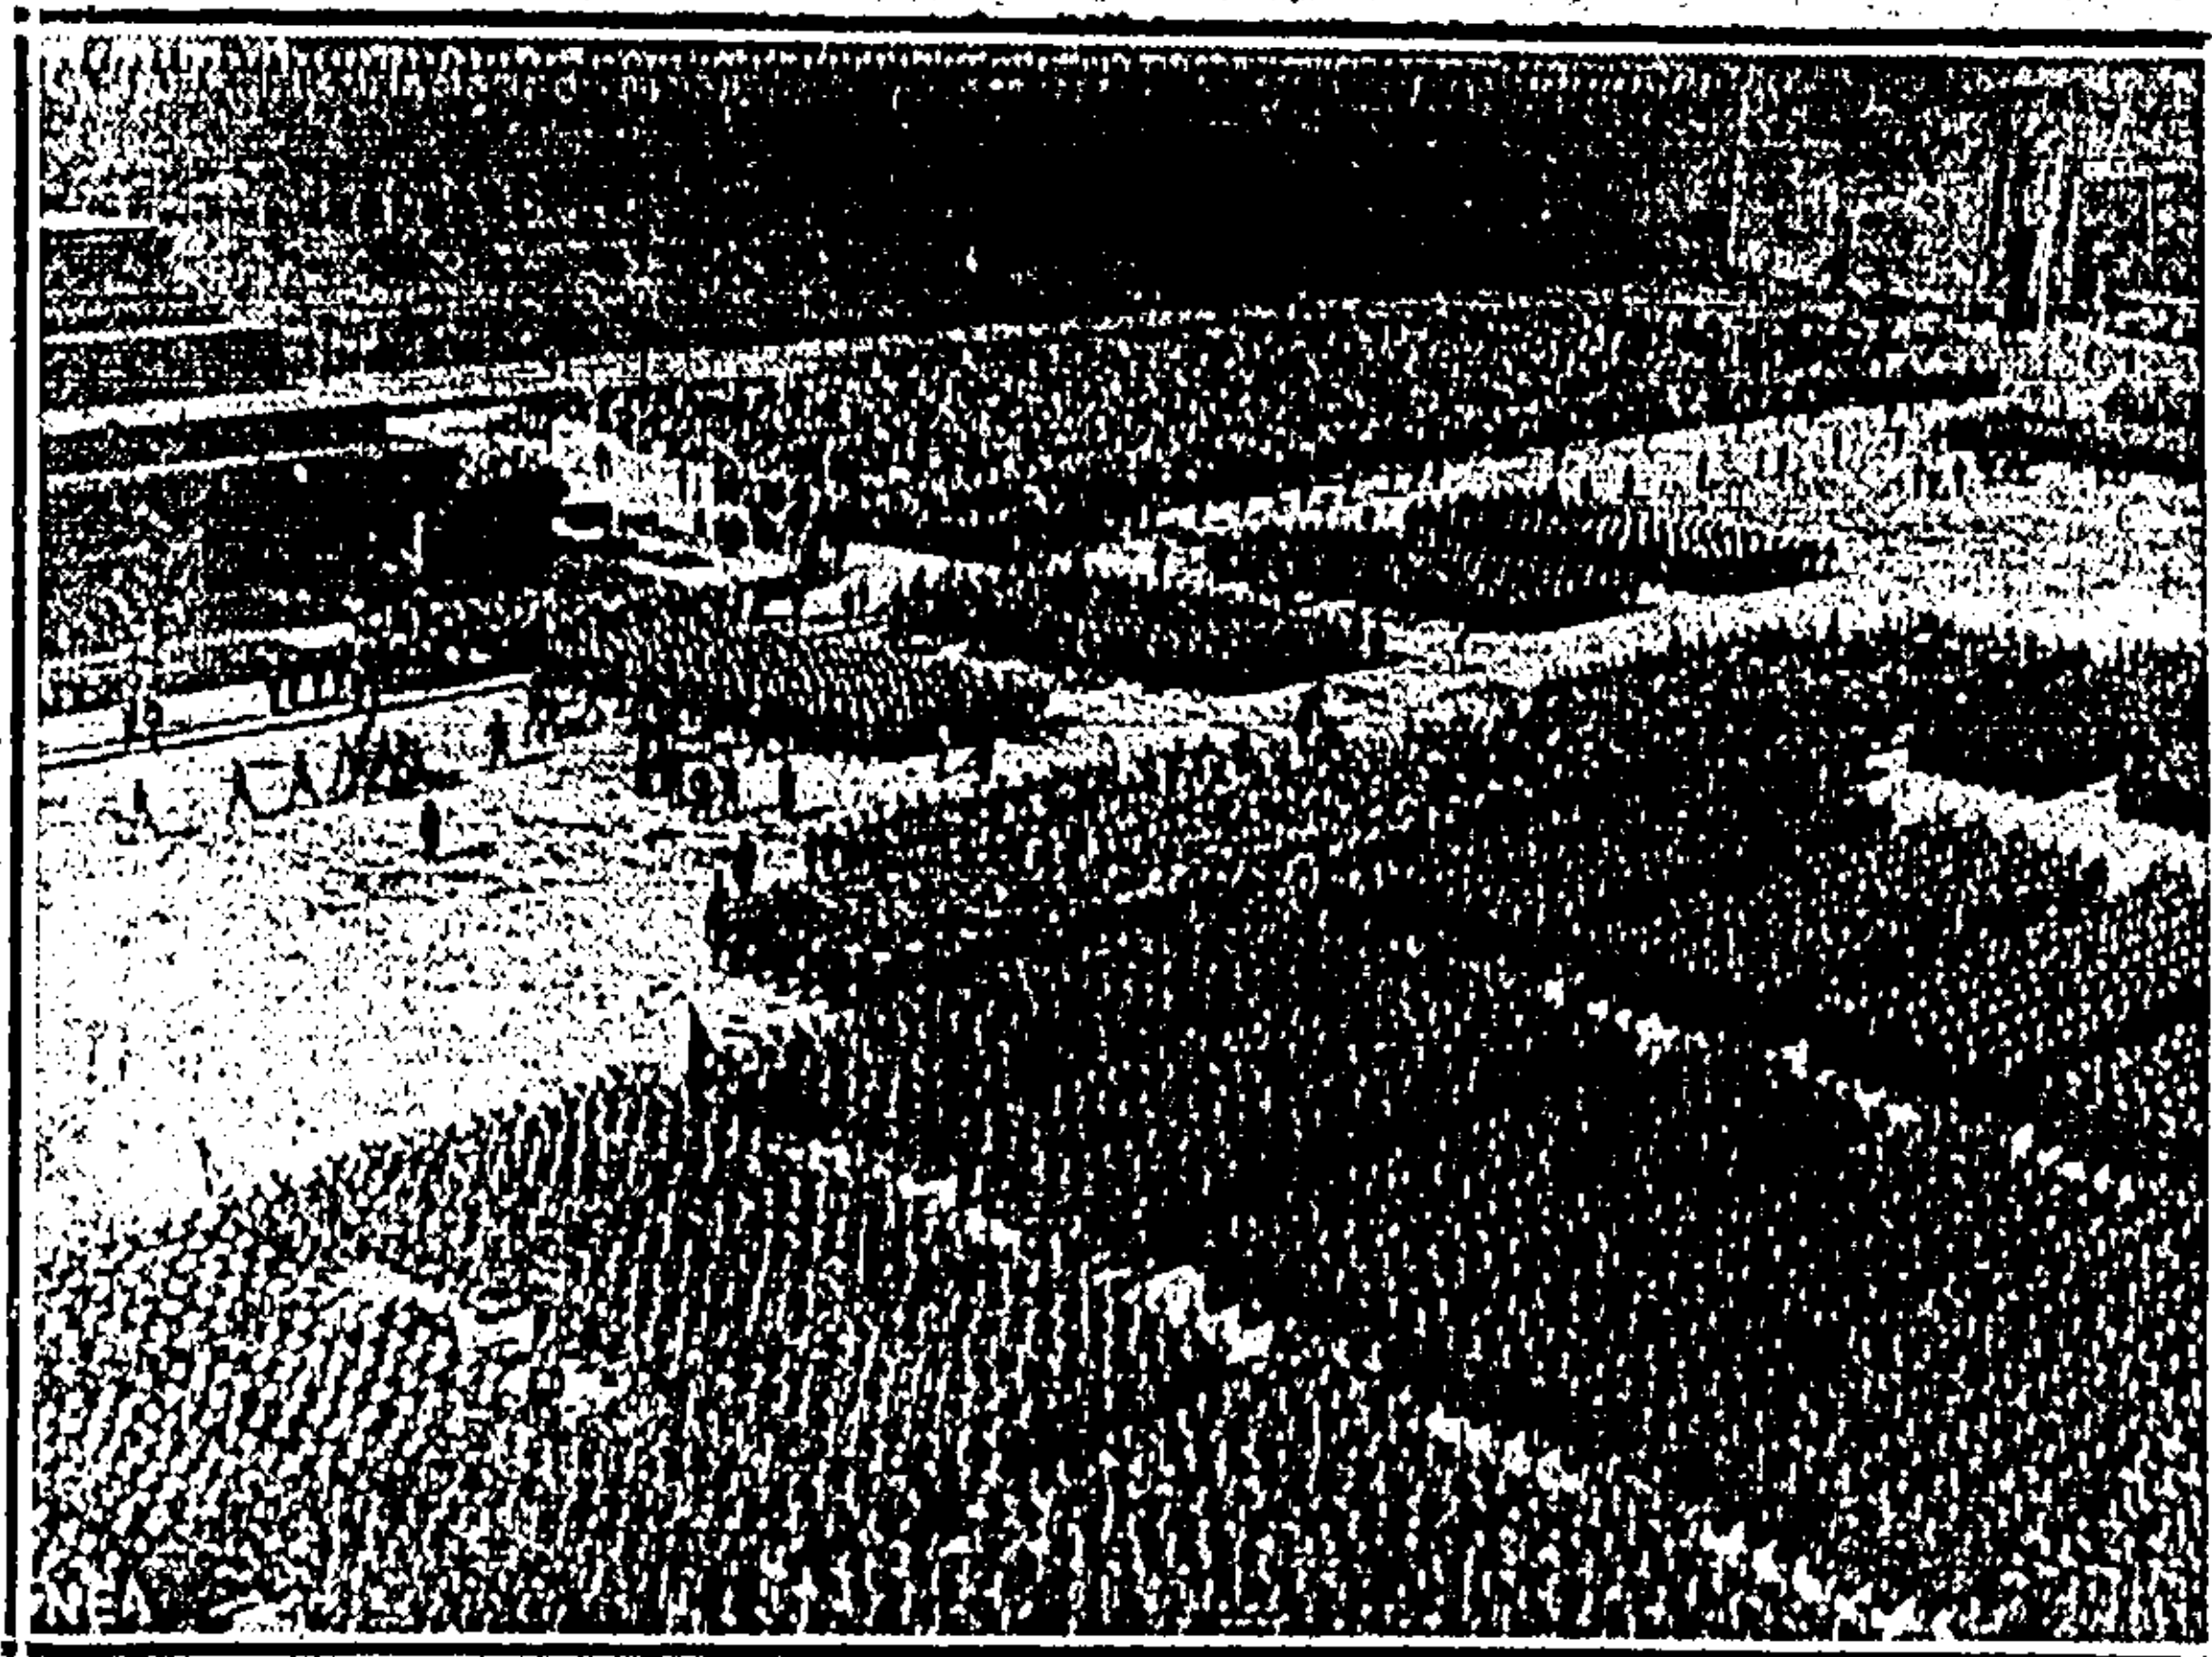

Going back to the idea of all the world being a stage, as Shakespeare put it, but with greater felicity, and the newspapers shifting the spot-light, so to speak, we want to call attention to that incident in Vienna, in which a Hungarian writer featured as the villain of the piece. He has been arrested for spreading false information. And quite rightly. We feel, like any other honest trader or artist or practitioner, that under-weight or distortion or sharp practice would be the ruin of our business. Unfortunately, newspapers at the ends of the earth have no way of checking upon the veracity of correspondents whose despatches reach them from centres of activity. They rely upon the well-established reputations of the news services they employ to "cover" their interests. Newspapers believe what they print; otherwise they would not print it. In such instances as this one in Vienna, where a journalist has been accused of spreading false information, his principals would be the first to assure him were he found guilty. There are fortunately few of that type of journalist who have the confidence of the employers and the public. The untrustworthy are known to the trade; and the trade will have no truck with them.

The fact must be faced that along with the development of Japanese imperialism on the ground has gone a progressive strengthening of the military party at home.

SUCCESS has inflamed the spirit of the Japanese nation. The dream of Asiatic empire, held by Japan for generations, justified in her eyes by the pressure of an increasing population, and intensified by the diplomatic rebuffs and restrictions imposed by America and the European Powers in the past 25 years, has become an open expression of national temper.

Most of Japan's liberal leaders have dropped out of the picture; several of them have been assassinated. A year ago there was no practical reason for opposing

WILL JAPAN and RUSSIA FIGHT?

Soviet Russia's mighty army on parade in the Red Square, Leningrad.

FOR years now the world has watched with increasing apprehension the growth of a war sentiment between Japan and Russia.

The military party in Japan wants to seize Russia's port of Vladivostok and her Maritime Province of Siberia lying just across the Japan Sea. Vladivostok, at the end of the Trans-Siberian Railway, offers a real military menace to Japan. With this port as a base, a fleet of Russian planes could easily cross the Japan Sea, less than 400 miles wide, bomb the Island Empire, and possibly inflict serious damage on the Japanese Navy.

From a political standpoint, the Russian Maritime Province is necessary to Japan to complete the outlines of her new Asiatic empire.

Other issues are incidental. Japan wants Russian recognition of Manchukuo, and probably of the similar "independent" government that apparently is being set up in Inner Mongolia. It is even stated that the imperialistic dreams of American fleet could be effected by the war party contemplate the seizure of all Siberia and Mongolia as far as Lake Baikal.

The Maritime Province of Siberia is left as a narrow strip of seaboard extending southward to Vladivostok, connected with Russia proper only by the main line of the Trans-Siberian Railway, a section cutting a wide circle northward through semi-Arctic territory. Japan is rushing a railway northward to cut the main line of the Trans-Siberian at Blagoveshensk. When this is completed, the Maritime Province will be entirely cut off and Vladivostok as a base will be strategically untenable.

If the military party is to continue in control of the policies of Japan, it looks like a flat issue between the two nations. Japan intends to have the Maritime Province. She can lodge Great Britain altogether from the Orient, would throw her back on the Mediterranean as the nearest base, and might even open up India to Japanese attack. At least it would bring Australia and New Zealand within the range of Japanese naval power.

The chief British weapon in the China Sea up to the present time has been economic power; but this also is being shattered by the Japanese trade offensive.

Last year India, for instance, imported 600,000,000 yards of cotton goods from England and 645,000,000 yards from Japan. Figures in various lines of trade, along the China coast, in the Dutch East Indies, and throughout the Indian Ocean littoral as far as East Africa, tell a similar story. It might almost be said that Great Britain retains her Pacific empire only by Japanese sufferance.

France does not possess such vested interests as Great Britain in China. Indo-China is her largest colony. It is far removed from Japan, and Japan has never removed from Japan, and Japan has never removed from Japan, and Japan has never removed from Japan.

Japanese plans, and many reasons for favouring them. Weak and disorganized China still presents a more formidable threat to the Japanese military plan than any other nation. Japan is well aware that Manchukuo is none too stable; the preponderance of the Chinese population there is overwhelming. And in China proper the boycott against Japan is always ready to be brought into play. Yet in view of hard facts there is no escaping the conclusion that if the military party in Japan insists on attacking Siberia, Russia will have to rely on her own force of arms.

STRATEGICALLY the Russian position in Vladivostok is hopelessly bad. Strong military preparations have been made; large stores of munitions have been sent from Russia and plans laid for the Soviet army to subside as far as possible on Eastern Siberia.

Perhaps the strongest force for peace is the fact that the Maritime Province of Siberia is not really a threat against Japan unless she so believes. Left alone, Russia would never dream of attacking Japan from Vladivostok. If the Japanese imperial dream could only contain itself, immediate danger of war in the Far East would quickly disappear.

BRITAIN has vast interests in the China Sea, yet in terms of ability to hold by force what she possesses in the Pacific region, her weakness is self-evident.

Hongkong is not a first class naval base. The base at Singapore will not be finished until 1937. A single successful stroke against Hongkong would dislodge Great Britain altogether from the Orient, would throw her back on the Mediterranean as the nearest base, and might even open up India to Japanese attack. At least it would bring Australia and New Zealand within the range of Japanese naval power.

The Very Idea!

CURRENT EVENTS

By Eddie "Ward Price" Kelly
JUST to be in the running we suppose we should comment on the Abyssinian situation again to-day.

But the only fresh news we've read about Abyssinia is the report of the awful smells in Addis Ababa.

This is evidently the reason why many members of St. John Ambulance in Hongkong are eager to volunteer for service in Abyssinia. They'll at least feel at home in one respect—they won't be allowed to forget the Wanchai or Central markets.

"Do you think there's going to be a war?" a friend asked us on the Star Ferry last night. "We're sure there is," we said sadly, "we've spent the money the wife gave us to pay the comrade's account."

Mussolini's to blame. When in Rome you don't do as the Romans do. You do as Mussolini says. The League of Nations may be fast but Mussolini's Fascist. Incidentally, when these sanctions become effective, they'll be calling it the League of Nations.

THEY blame the British delegate to the League of Nations for the sanctions. "Eden me wrong" is the latest Italian theme song. And in the Garden of Eden's Sir Samuel Hoare and Mr. Stanley Baldwin are the prickly pear. Oh, yes, and the latest theme song about Solon is "Ho ain't gonna reign no mo', no mo'."

Which is all we have to say about Ethiopia. But Abyssinia.

JUNIOR LAWN BOWLS SKIP OUTPLAYS SHANGHAI

BIG GATES BUT FEW WINS

ARSENAL ELATED & DESPONDENT

WEAKNESS IN THE FORWARDS?

London, Sept. 24. If it is possible for a man to be elated and despondent at once, George Allison must be undergoing the experience. The golden stream pours into Highbury with undiminished fervour, while attendances elsewhere are beginning to slump. And still victories, which are the lifeblood of all professional teams, continue to elude Arsenal. Two wins in seven attempts is hardly championship form.

In four home matches since the season opened less than a month ago, 234,000 people have seen Arsenal play and the gross receipts are roughly £15,000. Many Third Division clubs do not draw that amount in a season. Here are the illuminating figures:—

63,000v. Sunderland.
40,000v. Grimsby.
62,000v. Wednesday.
64,000v. Manchester City.

In the whole history of the game one cannot recall any club drawing such colossal crowds in four consecutive League matches. No wonder Arsenal are sensitive about that £15,000 profit last season. You can now watch for redoubled efforts to secure Walker, who scored two of (feared of) Midlothian's eight goals on Saturday.

Here are some opinions on the Arsenal's present play:—

Sunday Dispatch: "It is difficult to be dogmatic about what is wrong with Arsenal, but it is certainly crazy to recognise a forward line which scored six goals against Grimsby—and earned every one. Davidson and James are too much of a muckiness—even for the long pants both affect—and Cliff Bastin is not the Bastin we used to know. Bastin, I am afraid, has been recalled too soon. Arsenal should restore the Beasley-Bowden wing and partner Milne with James on the left."

News Chronicle: "There are signs that Arsenal's predominance in the First Division is on the wane. It is many years since Manchester City won at Highbury, yet they well and truly conquered the champions on Saturday. It seems that the Arsenal forwards are the main cause of the trouble. Does this mean that more huge sums of money will be expended before the season is much older? The Arsenal-Manchester City match was, however, one of the best of the season, except that a referee irritated players and spectators alike by his persistence in stopping the play for infringements which were not apparent. He also committed one serious blunder when he gave the Arsenal a penalty. I think he must have realised this from remarkable demonstrations by the crowd. Fancy spectators protesting against a penalty given to the home side! At least, it says a good deal for their sense of fairness. The incident occurred immediately in front of me. James lost his balance and fell without Dale coming in contact with him. Bastin scored with the kick, and then James put on a second goal. In this way the goals, Fred and Doreland had obtained earlier were equalised."

Manchester City's win at Highbury was their first for 12 years, and incidentally Chelsea won at West Bromwich for the first time in 23 years.

H. Williams, head groundsman to the Derbyshire County Cricket Club at Derby, has been appointed to a similar position with the Lancashire C.C.C. at Old Trafford.

TENNIS EXHIBITION IN MANILA

COCHET TOURING PHILIPPINES

COMING TO H. K. LATER

Manila, Oct. 8. Henri Cochet, famed French tennis star who played a series of matches here, will sail for the south to-day on the s.s. Mayon for exhibition matches there. He will be accompanied by Mme. Cochet, Leonardo Gavia, Jr., Juanito Gavia, Francisco Aragon and Rodrigo Diaz. They will play in Bacolod, Occidental Negros and may also appear in Iloilo and Cebu.

Henri Cochet concluded his tennis engagement in Manila yesterday afternoon by defeating Lope Yngayo, an one time No. 1 ranking player and national champion of the Philippines, in three sets, 6-2, 6-2, 6-1. Despite the one-sided score, Yngayo displayed a nice brand of tennis considering that he has been out of active tournament competition for the past three or four years.

Yngayo who turned professional two or three years ago when he became tennis coach at the University of the Philippines, had difficulty with his forehand shots. He lacked the steadiness which characterised his play when he was the Islands' top ranking net star. He made some fine rallies, however, and on several occasions he made some beautiful place shots to score against the great French ace. Yngayo won the second and sixth games of the first set. He took the first and fourth games of the second set. To the third set he won the opening game on his own service but dropped the next six in a row as Cochet tightened up on his playing.

WORPLESDON FOURSOMES

MISS WETHERED NOT TO PLAY

Miss Joyce Wethered, who has won the Worpleston mixed foursomes seven times with six different partners, is not going to play this year. Miss Wethered, who had been entered with the Hon. T. W. Coke, is due in England from her American tour only a few days before the start of the tournament, and she feels that she will have too little time for practice. It is possible that Miss Wethered will play next year with the Hon. T. W. Coke as partner.

The tournament this year will be extended to five days. Miss Molly Gourlay and T. A. Torrance, who won last year, have again entered, while Roger Wethered will play with Mme. Lacoste. France will also be represented by Mlle. Francine Tollen, who is to partner Brig.-General A. C. Critchley.

H. M. Lawson, the Hampshire fast bowler will play for the county as a professional next season.

GOING TO HONGKONG

After Henri Cochet returns from the southern islands he will sail for Hongkong where he will play a series of exhibitions before proceeding to Australia. He proposed to take Francisco Aragon to Hongkong and China as an exhibition partner but no definite arrangement has yet been made.

During Cochet's exhibition matches in Manila he has beaten the Islands' outstanding players. Francisco Aragon, No. 2 ranking, was the only player to extend him. Aragon won one set from the visitor and in a return match battled him to 7-5, 9-7 and 6-4.

J. C. CHALMERS SHOWS DEADLY FORM

NEARLY DEFEATS NORTHERNERS OFF HIS OWN BOWLING

MOST BRILLIANT PLAYER VISITORS HAVE MET IN COLONY

(By "Sagax")

A marvellous display of bowling by J. C. Chalmers, who skipped the Second Division rink in a lawn-bowls match against the Shanghai Interporters on the Taikoo R.C. green yesterday, all but won for the local side a glorious victory against the northerners but the listless bowls played by the other three Colony representatives negated all efforts of the Taikoo player and the junior side lost by 23 shots to 17.

Taking the form of all the players who have appeared against Shanghai during the present visit, there can be little doubt in the minds of followers of the game who have watched each match as it was played, that J. C. Chalmers has been the most brilliant exponent of the game that the visitors have thus far encountered, not excluding even the players who have figured against the Shanghai Interporters in either Thursday's or Saturday's fixtures.

It was Chalmers against Shanghai yesterday and that the local side was able to hold the visitors to a final margin of six shots was a great tribute to the Taikoo R.C. and former interport player. If any of the other three players had rendered any support at all the Shanghai team, on yesterday's form, would have suffered the ignominy of tasting defeat at the hands of a junior division quartette.

SHANGHAI HELD

For the first half of the game the Colony players, on the whole, were able to hold the Shanghai team to low scores and at one stage the junior side led by 15-11. It was only in the closing ends that the visitors crept ahead when Chalmers, through lack of support, weakened slightly and allowed the visitors to chalk up twelve shots on the last seven heads, during which Hongkong scored only two, on the 19th head.

Chalmers was able to control every shot almost to perfection and when he was not driving he was drawing with such deadly accuracy that time and again he was able to change the position, often giving Hongkong shots when the visitors had been lying three or four, or he was able to save shots when the visitors were threatening to register big counts.

Always it was Chalmers who was the player against whom the Shanghai team was competing. The others were never in the picture, except for occasional brilliant shots by Way, the local No. 2.

Bright was absolutely off form and if one has never seen him play before one immediately wonders how he ever came to have been selected and the same applied to Bastin who sent down about four good woods during the entire afternoon. The Club de Recreio player's failures made the task all the harder for Chalmers but it seemed that the harder the task the more brilliant was the local skip able to play.

GLOVER AND MUNRO

True, Shanghai relied only on two of the players but the other two at least gave the rink better support than did any of the three first men representing the Hongkong four. Train at No. 2, played his best game of the series and was constantly lying against the Jack. He found little opposition from Way and was often drawing shots for the side.

Charlie Richards was in one of his deadly moods and although there were occasions when he was missing shots he was rarely far off his objective and as No. 3 he helped to make it possible for the visitors to lie big counts almost every time that the skip went to bowl.

Neither Glover, at lead, nor Munro, as skip, was able to show anything like the form of the Interport matches. Glover, however, always had the better of Bright but merely because of the Hongkong player's weakness.

Munro could not rival the brilliance of Chalmers and was fortunate that Train and Richards were able to give him all the support he required. Occasionally he sent down a good wood but he was never as effective as is required of a skip.

To-day the Shanghai bowlers meet the Craigengower C.C. and Indian R.C. on the former's green at 3 p.m., this being the time at which all the remaining matches will be commenced. The Craigengower C.C. and Indian R.C. will be represented by D. M. Khan, A. R. Dallah, H. Beer and R. Bana.

AMERICANS ON TOUR

Ireland defeated the United States in a women's lacrosse match at Dublin recently by 12 goals to 2. In the first half Ireland led by 5 goals to 2, the scorers being Darley (2), Young (2) and Bryce-Smith for Ireland, and Schuyler (2) for the United States.

Ireland were much the faster in the second half and seven more goals were added by Wilton (2), McEach (2), Dunlop and Darley.

CAPTAIN OF CLUB FOOTBALLERS

ELECTED FOR THE COMING SEASON

A. G. Howe, former Hongkong Interporter and considered one of the best forwards in China, was elected Captain of the Shanghai Football Club's first eleven, at the Club's Annual meeting held at the Rowing Club last Wednesday evening.

The inclusion of Howe in this year's line-up has greatly altered the Football Club's outlook for the season and with the addition of promising material in the shape of new blood as well as past members who have decided to take an active part, the Club is anticipating one of the most successful seasons in the first division for many years.

Led by a veteran of Howe's reputation, the Club should find little difficulty this year in staging that long needed recovery which they have been trying to make for a number of seasons and if luck favours them there can be no reason why the Shanghai Football Club should not resume its former position in the realm of local soccer.

Sir John Brennan was re-elected President and R. Grimshaw, T. L. Rawthorne, J. R. Weeks and G. Forshaw, Vice-Presidents. J. K. Ewing and O. H. Mahon were named treasurer and secretary respectively for the coming year.

The general committee for 1936 will be composed of the following:—A. C. Sinclair, L. F. Stokes, F. Shaffer, and G. Mitchell. F. Burgess and C. S. Kimber have been elected to serve on the selection committee. First XI: Captain, A. G. Howe. Vice-Captain, G. Hedley. 2nd, XI: Captain, C. H. Mahon.

SATURDAY'S CRICKET TRIAL REVIEWED

EVERYBODY BEING GIVEN CHANCE OF SHOWING CAPABILITIES

VERY LITTLE GOT FROM THE MATCH

(By R. Abbi)

A further trial game was played at the Hongkong Cricket Club ground on Saturday last, and it is particularly clear how much attention the Selection Committee are paying to ensuring that everyone with the slightest claims to a trial gets his chance.

In a season like this, one has a pretty good knowledge of the general abilities of most players, and everyone will get at least one chance. Unfortunately, there is so little time before the date on which we play Shanghai, that only the more proven players can hope for extended trials. I fancy. But on Saturday last no less than ten new names appeared in the list. Captain Welch, Elvin, A. T. Lee, G. R. Sayer, H. W. Baines, E. R. Duckitt, F. A. Zimmerman, W. C. Hung, T. E. Pearce and F. Baker came in while A. C. I. Bowker, E. C. Fincher, L. T. Ride, Major Bonavia, C. C. Garthwaite, F. D. Pereira, N. McInnis, A. H. Madar, F. Goodwin and A. W. Ramsay stood down.

NO OVAL WICKET!

The trial was played on a wicket which appeared to be pitched very close to that used in Thursday's game, and was not too good, especially in the second innings when anything over medium appeared either to creep or to lift in a most disconcerting way. When the ball does one or the other consistently it is not nearly so difficult as when it alternates.

The start of Dunkley's side was appalling. After T. E. Pearce had taken a single to leg from Gosano, Baines was clean bowled by a beauty from the same bowler which swung a bit and beat him all ends up. A. T. Lee's first ball was a very long hop and Pearce cut it straight into the hands of Welch in the gully. (1-2-1). Pearce seemed pretty secure until a slightly slower one from Gosano, which, I think, came up from leg a bit, had him in two minds and took his off stick. At this period Gosano was bowling excellently and taking full advantage of the help which the pitch was giving him.

AN EARLY CHANGE

Then Elvin relieved A. T. Lee at the Law Court's end and Ballard went on for Gosano. Duckitt led out at the former and had he come out a shade would have put him into the Pavilion but he hit firm-footed and Ballard took a very high drive in front of the rails. It was a sporting crack anyway. (21-4-11). Zimmerman and Emilio Fincher then seemed to settle down, both playing free cricket though I thought the latter was a little more correct. He seems to me to have improved his style this year. They had added thirty-seven runs when a good ball from Elvin just sat on Zimmerman's balls. Six runs later Fincher was identified by a short ball off Ballard by Gosano. It was bad luck, however, as there was little wrong with the shot. The ball popped up very quickly and the fieldman moved like a flash and just got his left hand to it. Hung played some crisp shots but in trying to drive Ballard ballooned one to Sayer at extra cover and a prettily judged catch was taken. Meantime Ricketts had been batting soundly enough with an occasional clump very powerfully laid on, but Ballard beat him at last. (34-8-24).

A LAST WICKET STAND

Baker hit a couple of fours, one, I fear, rather a snick, but he only stayed with Dunkley until 103 was up. Then, however, Minu came in and with two left handers the fun began. Suffice it to say that unlike the experts of the "G"—was it Muggletonians—they stopped the good ones most scientifically and hit anything pitched up "blooming hard and blooming often." Dunkley got 33 and then, to rub things in, declared after the undefeated last wicket had added forty-five runs of which Minu claimed eighteen. It is queer that these Homeric stands always seem to come off at the end—or near end—of an innings.

At 4.10 p.m., Richardson and Bill Williams opened to Baker and Minu, and the first four overs only produced three singles. In the fifth over Williams got Baker to leg for two but was l.b.w. next ball (5-1-4). Baker was bowling very accurately and the pitch was not above suspicion, and T. A. Pearce was on the defensive. The next four overs produced a single from an overthrow off a return to the bowler, but it must be admitted that the ball was alternately keeping low and popping. Then Richardson with a square cut for two and a hook for four sent the first ten up in half an hour.

An over later Minu's analysis read 6-4-2-0. Then Hung relieved Baker and was all over the place in his first over. A long hop on his body, nearly head high, gave Pearce the chance to break his duck after playing twenty minutes of very watchful cricket, but with his usual luck next ball he got a beautiful one which just snicked the outside of his off leg. (17-2-4). Next over Minu's first ball bowled Sayer neck and crop. (18-9-1). In Hung's second over a long hop head high and wide of the off stump got him his second wicket as for some unknown reason Welch flicked at it and was, very properly, caught at the wicket (24-4-3). Hung then gave way to Pearce after Minu had bowled another maiden. Minu had bowled very long hop which Gosano lofted weakly over the bowler's head—but Pearce could not check his run soon enough to make the catch. Another long hop was nicely glanced to long leg for four. But the bowler had his revenge as he bowled Gosano off his hands.

A CONFIDENT APPEAL

Hayward went in but touched one from Ricketts who had relieved Minu and a confident appeal was answered against him. (33-6-0). Mackay then joined Richardson who had defended gallantly for an hour while making fifteen. The bowling then became a little less accurate and runs came a little faster. Mackay late cut Zimmerman and then straight drove him—both for four and scored three more off the one over. Both batsmen began to hit the ball quite hard and a stand was made. Mackay, who perhaps put more of the bowling, by the time eight was up had overtaken Richardson who had scored thirty, but Richardson regained the lead with a couple of nice fours. At ninety, however, he had a go at Ricketts and a ball fell; as far as I could see the ball went off his pad or body. 90-7-38. He had batted well for an hour and twenty-five minutes, and hit in all six fours.

MACKAY OUT

Off Baker's next over Mackay scored ten runs before being caught off his glove from one which got up nastily. Dunkley made no mistake with the catch. (100-8-40). With the two left handers, Elvin and Ballard in, the game became very dull, though there were a few snicks and narrow squeaks. T. E. Pearce bowled the last over which the batsmen treated with the most distinguished consideration.

DEDUCTIONS

Frankly we get very little from the game. Gosano showed much improved bowling form but beyond that there was little of note. It seems clear that Dunkley is building up a reputation as a sound performer at that most important position of number nine in the batting list. And so we go on!

FRIENDLY HOCKEY

In a friendly hockey match on the Marina ground yesterday afternoon, the Punjab Regiment defeated the Club de Recrio by three goals to nil after a fast and exciting match.

The winners were the better balanced team, their stickwork was much better than that of their opponents, who failed to combine to good effect. Two goals were netted in the first half from short corners, and the third netted in the second half.

MILITARY CRICKET

East Lances Easily Beat Royal Welsh Fusiliers

Brilliant bowling by Bds. Whitehead enabled the 2/East Lancashire Regiment to beat the 2/Royal Welsh Fusiliers at Cricket by 62 runs on Sunday at Sookunpoo.

Batting first, the East Lances declared at 105 for five wickets, Lieut. J. P. Williams hitting a chanceless 77. L/Cpl. Goldworthy helped with 41. At one stage of the Fusiliers' innings, which realised 103 runs, Whitehead had taken five wickets for only two runs, but he finished with five for 17.

L/Sgt. Collis was the only batsman to offer any real resistance to the East Lances bowlers and made 23 runs. Had it not been for the extras which totalled 35, the Fusiliers' score would have been considerably lower.

SERIAL STORY

DONNA OF THE BIG TOP

by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDDAL who call themselves "The Gypsy Sisters" are famous performers with Benfro's circus. Donna's parents, also circus performers, are dead. Five years earlier Madeline ran away from the middle-western farm where her grandfather, AMOS SIDDAL, lives. A few days before the circus is to play in her old home town Madeline receives a letter from her grandfather asking her to spend the weekend with him. Madeline begs Donna to go in her place. The two girls look alike and Donna considers it. When BILL SIDDAL, Madeline's cousin, comes for her it is Donna (pretending to be the other girl) who talks to him and later goes to dinner with him.

CHAPTER II

In the dressing room Madeline was changing her costume with the assistance of one of the wild west riders who augmented her salary by acting as maid to the star performers. Madeline's eyebrows lifted at Donna's entrance. "How's the cousin?" she asked.

Donna sat down on a folding stool and kicked off the heavy carpet slippers that covered her "soft soles." Dextrously she slipped from one costume into another. If she had heard her partner's question she gave no heed to it for she did not reply.

"It's funny your folks never write to but one of you girls," giggled Madeline's assistant. "Or maybe they write to you together?"

"They do," Madeline informed her.

"Beat it, Ruth. I can finish alone."

Ruth disappeared.

"What's Bill like?" Madeline demanded when she and Donna were alone.

"What you'd expect. A young hayseed. You'd never see him for dust, but," Donna smiled, "I like him. He was so embarrassed it was funny. I guess we were both embarrassed. I'm going to have supper with him after the show."

"I suppose the tight's shocked him out of a year's growth?"

"No, I don't think so. After all, bathing suits are so common that tight's shouldn't mean anything."

"Bathing suits?" Madeline sniffed.

"Where would Bill Sidal see a woman in a bathing suit? Outside of Little Creek there isn't a place to swim within 50 miles and no woman ever went swimming in Little Creek."

"I don't think," mused Donna.

"That your cousin has lived all his life in this part of the country. We didn't talk very long but somehow I got that impression. You say you've never seen him."

"There were some Siddals in Indianapolis," Madeline said, "but probably belongs to that other branch of the family. If he does why should he be a Grandpa's farm? I can't imagine a city man caring for farm life."

"That's our cue," Donna said suddenly, not at all sorry to interrupt the discussion of the young man she had just met. Again she thrust her feet into the carpet slippers, flung a black cloak about her and left the dressing room. Madeline followed. They walked through the lane of dressing rooms, passing small groups of performers who smiled or ignored them. The "cue," a strain of music, informed them that in two minutes the acts proceeding would finish and they must be ready to make their entrance.

As she slipped lightly across the arena Donna gave a swift glance at the rows of seats, knowing full well that under the blazing lights she could not distinguish Bill Sidal from any other person.

Both girls discarded their cloaks and slippers. With deft overhead movements Donna swung her lithe, perfect body up a swinging rope that led to the flying trapeze. Once she was in position there, Madeline did likewise. The two worked without notes, a reckless disregard of life and limb.

Donna knew that when she swung herself from the trapeze, to grasp it with her dexterous instep an instant later, Con David always stood in the wing of the entrance, watching her.

To him the trapeze act was sheer drama. His own was merely the routine of existence. Donna, on the other hand, thought Con's performance with the lions by far the most dangerous feat in the circus.

To-day Con's presence irritated her. She found it difficult to keep her mind on the count that was as necessary as the bars beneath her. Again and again her thoughts returned to the brief encounter with Bill Sidal. She wondered what he thought of her—she who had never cared for any man's opinion before. She wondered how the trapeze act appeared to him, and if he really believed her to be his cousin. Suddenly Madeline's sharp whisper, "Snap out of it! You almost missed me," brought an end to those speculations.

At last it was over—the chariot races, the wild west show, the grand finale. Lights were extinguished and the audience departed. Donna dressed quickly. She slipped into a printed silk frock that any small town girl might have worn. Her hat was a large straw hat with a wreath of daisies. Without makeup she looked younger than her 20 years, more frail and very lovely.

"Give him a kiss for me," Madeline laughed as they parted.

"I may tell him the truth," Donna retorted.

"If you do you'll miss your party for nothing would induce me to go to that farm!"

Bill was waiting at the spot Donna had designated. "Have I kept you long?" she asked, annoyed that her youth should tremble.

"Not very. It was a good show," he smiled down at her. They walked over the trampled grass to the railroad tracks and Donna said, in a low voice, "That's my home."

Bill frowned. "Not much of a home for a girl raised among trees

Again and again Donna's thoughts returned to Bill Sidal. She wondered how the trapeze act appeared to him.

and flowers and with plenty of ground around."

They did not speak again until they reached a broad walk leading toward the town. Then he said, "I wish I could persuade you to leave the circus and stay home with your grandfather. He's getting pretty old and he talks about you all the time."

"Maybe next winter," Donna stammered. "Just now it would be impossible."

"I suppose show life is thrilling. At least it looks that way, sitting where I did. But there can be a lot of interest around a farm, too. And it would only be while the old man is alive. I thought I'd hate the farm, and at first I did hate giving up what I was doing to settle down in the back woods. I'm sure, though, that if the place were mine I'd get a real kick out of trying to make it the best in the country."

"What were you doing?" Donna asked.

"Studying medicine. I'd have graduated this year if I hadn't quit. When Grandfather went blind some one had to be with him besides—"

"Blind?" Donna gasped.

"Didn't you know? Didn't you get the letter?"

"No, I didn't know." She shivered.

He looked at her sharply. "Mrs. Pinter said she wrote me the same time she wrote me, but I don't trust that woman. She has her eye on Grandfather—I call him that—and would like to marry him, blind or not. Naturally she doesn't like me, for I see through her schemes."

"Who is she?"

"Why, the housekeeper. Surely you remember her! When her husband was alive she lived up the road about three miles. After you left she came over to stay with Grandfather."

"The name—er—slipped my memory."

"I suppose so. You've met so many persons in the last five years. I've a car in town but I reckon we'll have to walk to the square. I hope you don't mind."

Blind! Did Madeline know her grandfather was blind? Did she know that a woman who might discover instantly that Donna was an impostor was the housekeeper? Donna asked hesitatingly, "You gave up your career to stay with Grandfather?"

"Some one had to."

"That was splendid of you."

Walking briskly, they reached the edge of the town. Frame houses with wide verandas, surrounded by well kept lawns and shade trees, gave Donna a touch of nostalgia for the life she had never known. Children romping among blooming rose bushes and old-fashioned garden flowers brought a lump to her throat.

"It's such a pretty town," she murmured.

"Yes, Lebanon is attractive. And there are some fine people living here. I've made lots of friends. The last statement was soon verified, for as they entered the square—four blocks of business buildings—several men called out greetings to Bill, then stared frankly at his companion.

CINEMA NEWS

NOTES FROM THE THEATRES

Fred MacMurray, Claudette Colbert's handsome leading man in the "Gilded Lily" makes his second appearance for Paramount in the principal role of "Car 99" opening at the Queen's Theatre to-morrow. Assisted by Sir Guy Standing, Ann Sheridan, William Frawley, Marina Schubert and others, MacMurray is cast as one of the gallant uniformed heroes of the famous Michigan State Police whose true story is told in "Car 99." The picture shows how this great anti-crime force is able to patrol an entire city efficiently through the use of radio control. The system faces its greatest test when a gang of desperadoes, assisted by a man who has spied on the police and has intimate knowledge of the force's workings, begin a series of defiant bank robberies. The gangsters cripple the radio communication in order to carry out a particularly daring robbery, but MacMurray, the rookie trooper, traps the gangsters and saves the life of his girl whom they have kidnapped. Charles Barton directed "Car 99," which was adapted from the series of short stories by Karl Detzer recently printed in Saturday Evening Post.

"In his hour of sweetest?"

Donna laughed gaily. "Of course not."

"But he'd like to be, huh?"

"Perhaps."

"Lilies of the Field"

The British and Dominions super, "Lilies of the Field," starring Winifred Shotter and directed by Norman Walker, forms a big attraction at the King's Theatre on Wednesday. Based on the brilliant comedy of the same title by John Hastings Turner, the film has been adapted by Dion Titherage with the assistance of the author and has been given a bright new treatment with special music. The result is magnificent—humorous entertainment served up with all the technical resources at B. and D.'s command. Winifred Shotter plays a piquantly contrasted role of a lively and ultra-modern young thing who suddenly adopts the pose of a demure Victorian miss, denouncing crinolines and becoming captivately cool. All this is designed to attract the attention of a handsome expert in antiques who arrives to inspect the country vicarage. Her essay in Victorian vampirism succeeds only too well. The young man played by Anthony Bushell is completely "fired." Winifred finds herself introduced to Mayfair as the latest craze, and succeeds in converting Society to crinolines with delightfully comic results. Then arises the problem of whether to keep up the pose, or confess and risk shattering romance with the young man. Winifred confesses, but all's well. The crisis passes happily. The ideally romantic team of Winifred Shotter and Anthony Bushell have the advantage of an exceptionally strong supporting cast. This includes 15-year-old Judy Gunn, a promising newcomer to films, playing as Winifred's twin sister; Ella Jeffreys, Claude Hulbert, Maud Gill, Hubert Harden, Tonle Bruce, Gladys Jennings, Jack Raine, and Bobbie Comer. One of the high lights of "Lilies of the Field" is the special music written for it by the late Philip Brahman, and Mr. Harry Ferrett, the well-known orchestrator. Mr. Brahman, composer of "Limelight Blues" and innumerable song-hits, left behind him some delightful music including two numbers, "Whistle a Song," and "Blue Devil," both of which will be heard in the film, and which have all the ingredients of popular hits.

"The Crusades"

Cecil B. DeMille, master showman in creating his greatest picture "The Crusades," which closes at the Queen's Theatre to-day, gives exhibitors super-de-luxe entertainment, intriguing the eye with spectacle, assailing the heart with tender romance and exalting the moral sense with religious passion. Filled with inspiration, the production humanizes the primitive virtues to stir and elevate, with each moment enriched by taste and beauty. Aside from pomp and majesty, glitter and gallop, a love clash between Henry Wilton, an English knight, and the beautiful young, as Princess of Navarre, shines with warmth and fervour. Set against this alliance, C. Henry Gordon as Philip of France, insists Richard marry his sister, Katherine DeMille, per his royal pledge. Ian Keith, (Continued on Page 11.)

REAL WORK OF MERCY

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL SOCIETY

The annual report of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul, just issued, shows the excellent work which is being carried on for the alleviation of distress in the Colony. The following extracts are from the report:

Relief in Money and Provision.—The expenditure under this head for the whole of 1934 amounted to $7,110; for the first six months of 1935 it was $3,719.60. The above sum of $3,719.60 was expended in the maintenance of 330 families, comprising 205 persons to whom assistance has been given irrespective of race, nationality and creed. During the period under review 750 visits have been made to the Poor in their homes and in the hospitals. The Society has also expended $88.75 in providing shoes and clothing for the poor children for the six months under review. In consequence of the acute trade depression and resultant increase in the number of the unemployed, the question of special relief has given the Society no little anxiety during the period. Due to the smaller revenue, it was not possible to accept new cases freely, but cases of very distressing nature are always being considered and wherever possible relief is given to the best of the Society's resources.

Medical Aid.—The expenditure in 1934 was $195.75 while for the six months ended June 30th, 1935, it amounted to $88.55. The Society is deeply grateful to Drs. Ozorio, Gutierrez and Barnes for their honorary medical treatment and to the St. Raphael Society for the free burials.

Housing Accommodation.—The expenditure under this head during the whole of 1934 amounted to $1,601.15 while for the six months, January/June 1935, the disbursement was $825.12. However, on account of the acute trade depression and retrenchment in many business establishments the Society had to come forward on several occasions to the assistance of some poor families in their plight against default for rent and the sum of $50.95 was spent to relieve such cases.

EDUCATION OF POOR

The Society has always been deeply concerned in the provision of education for the children of the poor. The Education Subcommittee organized some years ago to look after the moral and intellectual improvement of the students have been working very successfully. Out of 160 children whose parents are the Society's beneficiaries 105 are receiving an English education at the expense of the Society at St. Joseph's College, St. Mary's School, Italian Convent, St. Francis School and Maryknoll Convent School and 35 attending the Society's Vernacular School, The Kai Lap School, Wanchai. Besides providing education for these children, the Society is also maintaining three destitute orphan girls at the Italian Convent, Caine Road, and one boy at St. Louis Industrial School, West Point. The Society is grateful for the reduced charges made by these schools. Under the head of Education the Society spent during the six months January/June, 1935, $863.34 for books and stationery. During the same period the disbursement for tuition and board was $1,365.00. The total expenditure on education in 1934 was $2,891.63.

APPEAL TO PUBLIC

The Council feels that it can again appeal with confidence to the kind generosity of the Hongkong public for support both on the occasion of our "Al Fresco Fete" which will be held this year in Kowloon, on the vacant ground near Rosary Church, Chatham Road, on Sunday, November 3, and the Street Sale of Roses, on "Our Poor Day" on Monday, December 2.

The Society depends principally on these two annual public appeals for funds with which to continue its good work. Hongkong has unfortunately been badly hit by the acute trade depression with resultant decrease in the Society's revenue and corresponding curtailment of its activities. The comparative revenue figures given speak for themselves:—1930, $12,486.64; 1931, $12,148.65; 1932, $12,762.01; 1933, $8,675.15; 1934, $7,639.41.

The Society, however, feels that its appeal is a deserving one and is optimistic enough to hope that it will receive the generous support which it has met in the previous years from the public of this Colony.

Seen to loathe people on a waterfront wharf last night, at about 7.45, Leung Lam, 27, unemployed, was searched and a razor blade was found in his possession. The man was charged before Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Magistracy this morning with possession of an instrument fit for an unlawful purpose, and pleaded guilty. He was fined $10 or one month's imprisonment, and $100 or one month's imprisonment, and $100 or one month's imprisonment.

Dern Visits Emperor

CAREFULLY AVOIDS INTERVIEWS

Tokyo, Oct. 15.
The Emperor to-day granted an audience to the United States Secretary for War, Mr. George Dern, visiting Japan on his way to Manila.

Yesterday Mr. Dern visited the Imperial Palace and signed the Emperor's guest book. He also called at Omiya, the detached palace, and signed the Dowager Empress' book.

He is spending most of his time visiting important points. At the famous Meiji Shrine he remarked upon the atmosphere of peace, adding that it reminded him somewhat of Mount Vernon.

To-day he visits the Foreign and War Offices and to-night will be Mr. Koki Hirota's guest at dinner.

He is carefully refraining from granting interviews on international subjects and instead talks of America's business improvement and predicts President Roosevelt's re-election. — United Press.

REFUNDING IN U.S.

WAR LOAN PARTLY CONVERTED

Washington, Oct. 14.
The Treasury Department announced to-day the completion of the refund of $1,246,000,000 of the Fourth Liberty Bonds of which $995,000,000 worth have been converted, leaving $251,000,000 redeemable in cash. This is considered satisfactory.

The operation completes the programme of refunding War Loans and the Treasury is now expected to turn its attention to the refunding, on a long-term basis, of numerous issues of short-term obligations, maturing in 1936.

A sizeable refunding operation, possibly for $500,000,000, is expected in bond circles in early March. — Reuter Special.

MAN COLLAPSES IN GAOL

DIES TEN MINUTES AFTER ADMISSION

Sentenced at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday morning to one year's hard labour, a man, Hsu Kam, 48, was received into Victoria Gaol at 2.40 p.m. and ten minutes later he collapsed and died.

A formal inquest was conducted at the Central Magistracy this morning. Mr. Macfadyen sitting as Coroner, assisted by the following jury:—Mr. C. Black (foreman), Mr. P. W. Grant Cameron and Mr. Woo Hing-chow.

Chief Warder Barrett gave formal evidence.

Dr. Ingram Shaw prison doctor, testified that at 2.45 p.m. yesterday he was called to see a prisoner at the Reception Room. On arrival five minutes later, the man was dead. The post-mortem examination conducted by witness showed that the cause of death was pulmonary tuberculosis and, secondarily, heart failure.

The deceased's medical history disclosed he had been in prison twice before and on both occasions he was suffering from tuberculosis. The deceased's sudden collapse was not surprising. There were no signs of injury. The jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

A BITE OR A SCRATCH

KOWLOON DOG CASE PUZZLE

The question, "When is a bite not a bite?" was the puzzle which the Kowloon Magistrate, Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones, sought to answer when Arthur J. Burnie, of the Palace Hotel, appeared before him in answer to a summons for allowing a bull terrier abroad in a restaurant at No. 20 Hankow Road without a lead or muzzle at 8 p.m. on October 3.

Inspector Stinson stated that the summons was taken out after a report was made to the police by the mother of a little girl who had been either bitten or scratched on the eye by the dog.

Defendant stated that the dog was on a lead at the time.

The little girl's mother explained to his Worship that the girl was playing on the floor with the dog. They were on the same level and the dog had its mouth open when it turned and knocked the girl's face. When the incident occurred, the dog was wagging its tail. She also expressed the belief that the dog did not mean to bite the child. It was not the first time the child had played with the dog.

Defendant stated that it could hardly be called a bite, as the dog did not close its mouth.

The Magistrate explained to defendant that if a dog was muzzled or on a lead and managed to bite anybody, it was deemed as unmuzzled. Under the circumstances he would accept the explanation as it was not strictly a bite, and in discharging defendant asked him to take extra precautions with his dog.

Sergeant Hill said the defendant was employed as a carpenter in repairing the inside of No. 106 The Peak. While there he took from a drawer $10 each on three successive days. The theft was reported to the police and defendant was arrested. He admitted stealing the money and the pen, and stated he had spent some of the money on opium and heroin.
